PRETORIA TO SURRENDER

Next News from Roberts Expected to Be From the Capital.

KRUEGER IS AT MIDDLEBURG

According to Correspondent at Delagoa Bay Boers' Last Stand Will Be at Machado Dorp.

Cape Town June 2—A dispatch to the Argus of this city from Delagoa [illegible] says [illegible] will surrender.

President Kruger according to this correspondent is said to be at Middelburg and he adds the last stand of the Boers will be made at Machado Dorp.

London June 2—Lord Roberts reports to the secretary of state for war the Marquis of Lansdowne as follows:

"Johannesburg May 31 9:10 a m — [illegible] report of his operations during [illegible] today. He was strongly opposed throughout his march but managed to [illegible] with very little loss and is now holding the [illegible] which I directed him to go north of Johannesburg. Two officers were wounded and two men killed and [illegible] wounded."

Lord Roberts' report of the movements of the British troops in the Transvaal is somewhat mysterious [illegible] the fact that General French's [illegible] took two days to reach the commander in chief at Johannesburg it is believed that either French must [illegible] he is in the [illegible] with his communication [illegible] probable and it is surmised [illegible] Lord Roberts' vague phrase [illegible] that French is now holding the [illegible] north [illegible].

[illegible] tion is quite close to Pretoria and the additional fact that Lord Roberts dispatch published today is dated four hours earlier than the one given out [illegible] that it [illegible] place [illegible] more important [illegible] that Lord Roberts [illegible].

Possibly the next place Lord Roberts will be heard from will be Pretoria. It seems that French should certainly be within striking distance of the capital today.

General [illegible] appears to have returned to Senekal after fighting eastward and contemplates an early [illegible] Boer prisoners say that [illegible] men were killed and many wounded in the recent fight. [illegible]

The British government promised the British nation that the cost of the war will be defrayed by the Boers. But as [illegible] in a position to [illegible] Britain must obtain the money from the gold mines which will [illegible] whereas the Transvaal [illegible] of the war—Rhodes Wernher, Beit and others will suffer most. In [illegible] a garrison of [illegible] 000 men the cost of which the mines will also have to [illegible] rebellion will break out [illegible] for years but for centuries. For England this means a constant source of trouble [illegible].

ROBERTS TELLS HOW HE ENTERED JOHANNESBURG

London June 2—A telegram from [illegible] dated Johannesburg [illegible] but which was not dispatched [illegible] until [illegible] the war office [illegible]:

"[illegible] of Johannesburg [illegible] thanks [illegible] the Transvaal commandant [illegible] and order prevailed throughout.

"[illegible] on my entrance [illegible] Johannesburg [illegible] government offices where he [illegible] all of whom [illegible] would continue [illegible] until [illegible]. Johannesburg is very empty but a good crowd of people assembled in the main square by the time the British [illegible] which [illegible] three cheers for the queen [illegible].

"At the end of the ceremonies the Seventh and Eleventh divisions marched [illegible] with the naval brigade, the heavy artillery and two brigade divisions [illegible]. General Ian Hamilton's column and the cavalry [illegible] the [illegible] and evidently took keen interest in the proceedings.

"The Fourteenth and naval brigades have been left in Johannesburg to preserve order, while the remainder [illegible] north of the town on the Pretoria road."

RODGERS TO RE-ESTABLISH THE EUROPEAN STATION

[illegible] from Washington [illegible] that Admiral Frederick Rodgers has [illegible] ted to re-establish the European station according to the general [illegible] at the navy department [illegible] will probably fly his pennant from the new battleship Kearsarge in the [illegible] before the end of August.

At the final inspection of the battleship the first of this week by Admiral [illegible] this information was imparted [illegible] the officers of the ship [illegible] it is the navy department['s] wish [illegible] a month or two at least.

The choice of the Kearsarge as flagship of the European fleet is regarded particularly appropriate [illegible] impression concerning [illegible] latest products of American naval [illegible] ments and of critical auxiliaries.

Admiral Rodgers is also regarded as fitted to command this important station which was abandoned [illegible] two years ago and on which no American pennant has since been displayed except that of Admiral Dewey last year.

All other vessels of the fleet except the Alabama which has just been completed [illegible] have not been selected and it is possible that [illegible] when the admiral will naturally wish to cruise into the Mediterranean.

By that time unless the Porte in the meantime pays the promised missionary indemnity the command will [illegible] strength and until capable of making a [illegible] of force.

EXTRAORDINARILY BOLD ROBBERY IN CALIFORNIA

Raymond Cal June 2—One of the [illegible] robberies ever committed in [illegible] miles [illegible] Mariposa [illegible] stage [illegible] convoy [illegible] soldiers was held up by highwaymen who [illegible] evidently [illegible] that Major [illegible] and [illegible] in command in [illegible] to the Yosemite national park [illegible] a camping place. The highwaymen suddenly appeared, masked and getting the drop on the troopers took away their guns and held the troopers till the stage arrived.

They rolled me on the Big Oak flat road but you can't this time.

[illegible] Griffiths of the South [illegible] a passenger on the stage and collected $1.80 from the [illegible] which he ordered the [illegible] was successfully held up, the robbers getting about $10. The mail and express matter were not molested.

CHINA MAKES LITTLE EFFORT AGAINST "BOXERS"

Pekin Friday June 1—American [illegible] guards numbering [illegible] here in the midst of the dragon [illegible] streets were unusually [illegible] though the people were [illegible] unusual spec[illegible] manifestation of hostility was [illegible] of the guards has already had a marked effect upon the [illegible] the Chinese [illegible] foreign [illegible] excitement in the adjacent [illegible] has been much allayed. [illegible] refugees still flock [illegible] the Boxers are [illegible] the Boxers have been [illegible] their capture would [illegible]. All the government [illegible] to occupy the scenes [illegible] real repressive measures have been taken.

Tien Tsin June 1—The French consul [illegible] information from [illegible] Ting Fu that [illegible] foreigners including six ladies and a child who were attempting to escape from Pao Ting Fu in boats were attacked by [illegible] Boxers [illegible] and [illegible]. Many of the foreigners [illegible] were killed [illegible] the fate of the [illegible] the party [illegible] ammunition [illegible] against their assailants.

Shanghai June 2—The empress dowager has ordered the governor of Shan Si to arrest [illegible] of the Pekin syndicate [illegible] chief of the Shan Si commercial bureau [illegible] a leading banker on the ground that they are dangerous characters, but in reality because they are connected with British enterprises.

LITTLEFIELD TRUST BILL

Passed by the House With Only One Vote In the Negative.

AMENDS THE SHERMAN ACT

Measure Goes to Limit of Congressional Authority Labor Unions Excepted from Law.

Washington June 2—Only one vote in the house today was against the Littlefield trust bill to amend the Sherman act of 1890 to make it more effective in the prosecution of trusts and combinations, their agents, officers or attorneys.

Mr Mann (Rep., Ill.) cast the negative vote. [illegible] statements of the Republican leaders goes to the limit of the authority of congress under the constitution.

All the Democratic minority amendments except one were defeated. That was an amendment declaring that nothing in the act should be construed to apply to trades unions or labor organizations. All except eight Republicans, Messrs. [illegible] Littlefield (Maine), Bailey, Long, [illegible] and Cannon and Hitt [illegible].

The [illegible] trust [illegible] very contract or combination in the form of trust or conspiracy in restraint of commerce among the states or with foreign nations illegal and every party to such contract or combination guilty of a crime punishable by a fine of not less than [illegible] or imprisonment not less than six months [illegible]. It provides that any person injured by a violation of the provisions of the [illegible].

The definition of "person" and "persons" in the present law is enlarged so as to include the agents, officers or attorneys of corporations.

For purposes of commerce it declares illegal all corporations or associations [illegible] carrying on business for purposes [illegible] laws provides that they may be [illegible] interstate commerce and forbids them the use of the United States mails.

It provides for the production of persons and papers and confers jurisdiction upon United States circuit and district courts for the trial of cases under it and authorizes any person [illegible] prosecute proceedings under it.

When the amendment providing that nothing in the act should be construed to apply to the trade unions or labor organizations was brought up Mr Ray raised the point of order that it was not germane. The speaker overruled the point of order, saying that it was in order under the agreement. The Democrats [illegible] cheer.

Now we have you in the hole, shouted someone on the Democratic [illegible] for the amendment. Mr Babcock (Wis.) was the first to vote with the Democrats and his vote was greeted with applause. As each Republican voted for it the Democrats applauded. They were especially demonstrative when Mr Grosvenor (Ohio), Mr Ray (N. Y.) and Mr [illegible] (Iowa) voted in the affirmative.

The [illegible] overwhelming majority 260 to 8. The announcement was greeted with cheers on [illegible].

The vote was then taken on the passage of the bill. On this vote the Re[publicans] [illegible] repeated the Democratic performance of applauding the Democrats as they voted for it. The bill was passed 273 to 1. The announcement was cheered to the echo.

At 5:30 p. m. the house adjourned.

THE SENATE PASSED THE CUBAN EXTRADITION BILL

Washington June 2—After an extended [illegible] the senate today passed the bill providing for the extradition of persons who have committed crimes in Cuba from the United States to the island. As amended the [illegible] shall be punished under the laws of Cuba as administered by Cuban courts.

The last of the appropriation bills [illegible] was passed. [illegible] bill providing for numerous [illegible] public works.

Mr Stewart proposed to strike out from the extradition bill the provision of the proposed law that the judge [illegible] where he will be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation and be confronted with the witnesses against him and have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor and have the assistance of counsel for his defense.

Mr Hoar, chairman of the committee on judiciary, antagonized the amendment [illegible] the rights assured to him in this country as it was proposed by the provision quoted to give him in Cuba.

Teller's Caustic Speech

In a somewhat caustic speech in favor of striking out the provision Mr Teller maintained that the alleged criminal ought to be satisfied to be tried by the courts now in existence in Cuba under the authority of the United States.

Mr Tillman said it seemed to him that when an American accepted an appointment in Cuba and broke the law and brought disgrace upon his country at the same time he ought to suffer the consequences as they might be meted out to him by the laws of the Cubans where he had committed his crime.

Mr Bacon referred to the alleged conspiracy of Captain Carter with Greene and Gaynor at Savannah, Ga., which he said [illegible] out of about $2,000,000. He said Gaynor and Greene were the men who had committed offenses while Captain Carter was in prison. A federal judge in New York had refused [illegible] to extradite Gaynor and Greene [illegible] and they were [illegible]. He [illegible] instance he said [illegible] indicate a [illegible] that a majority of criminals at which [illegible] was aimed might escape.

Mr Fairbanks said he was willing to accept the amendment. There had been a difference of opinion in the judiciary committee as to the provision but it had favored its elimination from the bill from the [illegible].

[illegible] claiming we ought not restrict [illegible] American citizen [illegible] our own.

Mr [illegible] said the plain issue was as to whether an American citizen presumably innocent should be taken to Cuba and tried as Dreyfus had been tried. Yet as the session was coming to an end he was anxious [illegible] the passage of the bill with or without the proviso.

The proviso was stricken out 36 to 10 and the bill passed without division.

Philippine Speeches

The Philippine bill was then taken up and Mr Clay (Ga.) made a speech on the tremendous growth of public expenditures since early days.

[illegible] Philippines [illegible] that the treaty of Paris was the law of the land. Every American citizen is bound by it. To advocate the [illegible] the law of this country. Sympathizers with Aguinaldo's cause cannot extenuate their course by the employment of such terms as imperialism and militarism. The advocates of Aguinaldo have challenged the forces of the administration to a battle at the polls and that challenge has been accepted. The result could not be doubtful. The American people will support the administration. He said Cuba was the key to the Gulf of Mexico and should always be controlled by the United States. He was inclined to the belief that Cuba eventually would be annexed to the United States by the wish of the Cubans themselves.

Mr Allen presented resolutions in memory of the late Wm. L. Greene, representative from Nebraska. Eulogies were pronounced by Senators Allen, Turner and Thurston.

Resolutions expressive of the senate's [illegible] were adopted and then as an additional mark of respect the senate at 4:35 p. m. adjourned until Monday at 10 a. m.

ROOT'S REPORT ON THE PHILIPPINE CASUALTIES

Washington June 2—Secretary Root today sent to the senate in response to [illegible] the number of soldiers who have been killed and have died of wounds in the Philippines. Mr Root also gives the number of those who have gone insane and have committed suicide. He states that the number of suicides in cases and the number of soldiers who have not been increased by service in the Philippines but remain substantially the same number per thousand as in the period of peace prior to the war with Spain.

The casualties in the Philippines from [illegible] according to the report were:

Deaths—Regulars [illegible] officers and [illegible] men; volunteers [illegible] officers and [illegible] men. Wounded—Regulars [illegible]; volunteers [illegible] officers and [illegible] men.

The number of insane soldiers admitted to the hospital at Washington from the Philippines to May 21, 1900, are: Regulars [illegible]; volunteers [illegible] of which [illegible] and 41 still remain, one discharged unimproved and one on a visit from hospital.

The number of insane soldiers from the Philippines now in the United States [illegible] at San Francisco to be sent to Washington are: Regulars [illegible]; volunteers [illegible]. Held at San Francisco [illegible] not confirmed: regulars 6, volunteers 18.

DECISION IN CELEBRATED MINING CASE IN MONTANA

Butte Mont June 2—Judge Knowles of the United States circuit court handed down his decision today in the celebrated mining case of the Colusa-Parrott company [illegible] ex-United States Senator W. A. Clark, and the Anaconda company, controlled by Marcus Daly. The question was of the union of the vein of the Colusa-Parrott and its connection between the 800 and the 1,000 foot levels of the mine with that of the Anaconda. The suit was [illegible] that the Anaconda people [illegible] union.

The court [illegible] for the Anaconda company, holding there are two distinct veins.

The best experts in the country were employed as witnesses in the case.

THEFT IN COSTA RICA

International Episode May Develop From Robbery of U. S. Minister's Postoffice Box

[illegible] to the Picayune from New Orleans says: Startling news [illegible] from Costa Rica. The correspondent of a New Orleans paper writing from Port Limon under date of May [illegible] sends news of a serious nature which may result in an international [illegible]. [illegible] May [illegible] the postoffice box of [illegible] Minister Merry in the postoffice of San Jose was broken open and the letters therein stolen.

The theft caused a sensation. Minister Merry [illegible] that there were several important [illegible] in the box [illegible] the latest being from [illegible] Managua, Nicaragua. The fact that this letter was among those stolen furnishes in all probability the clew to the thieves. [illegible] the settlement of the trouble between Nicaragua and Costa Rica in which the United States official [illegible] feeling against this country because of alleged favoritism shown to Nicaragua. It is thought that the rifling of the postoffice box was done by the agents of the party who disbelieve in the sincerity of this country and who stole the letter from Managua to get proof of their [illegible].

Minister Merry has complained to the Costa Rican government [illegible] the [illegible] that country disavows all responsibility for the [illegible] have [illegible] an investigation to discover the thieves.

[illegible] Greytown [illegible] probably bring the official report of the [illegible].

DOTY IS CONFIDENT

New York Health Officer Says That Plague Cannot Obtain a Foothold in the Metropolis

New York June 2—Dr. A. H. Doty, health officer of the port of New York, in an interview said that there is not a city in the world whose [illegible] of New York [illegible] he has no fear that bubonic plague, like typhus fever, is preeminently a disease which thrives in filth and overcrowding and other bad sanitary conditions.

Although the transmission of the bubonic plague by vermin complicates the treatment of [illegible] tion it is quite certain that the danger from it can be reduced to the minimum by the observance of proper [illegible] in an interview:

I don't hesitate to say that on the appearance of bubonic plague in any [illegible] exist and where the importance of cleanliness and fresh air is fully recognized the disease would soon be under control.

CHARGES AGAINST PECK

Parisians are Greatly Interested in Stories Cabled from America

[illegible]

Paris June 2—The republication here of articles which have appeared in the American press directed against Commissioner General Peck's management and charging the misuse of [illegible] by his staff [illegible] evidence that the charges are true.

While some are [illegible] with Mr Peck [illegible] insinuate that he is involved in any act not in [illegible] the [illegible] any but the [illegible] possess a willingness that the full investigation be made.

There are those who privately make charges varying in [illegible] but inquiry into the case develops either lack of [illegible] name of the accuser [illegible] charges.

That there is considerable friction and discontent among those connected with the commission and among some of the exhibitors is beyond doubt.

Washington is kept posted on affairs and on the best of authority the Associated Press is informed that the government has requested to be furnished with a list of employes [illegible] they were appointed and by whom they were recommended.

Mr Peck however denies having [illegible] is being decreased each week as the various experts and employes complete their work and the official force will soon be much smaller.

Friends of Mr Peck state that his health is very good and that the nervous condition which visitors attribute to worry is an affliction from which he [illegible]. There certainly is not the slightest foundation for the statement that he intends to resign his position on account of ill health.

CAVALRY FOR PHILIPPINES

Three Regiments May Be Sent During Latter Part of June

New York June 2—A special to the Times from Washington says:

When Generals Otis and Schwan arrive here there will be a conference between them and Secretary Root in [illegible] troops to the Philippines.

General MacArthur [illegible] has been [illegible] for some time [illegible] his request should be complied with but nothing will be done until Secretary Root has obtained the views of General Otis and General Schwan.

Three cavalry regiments will be sent [illegible] regiments will [illegible] is one of the points on which the advice of Generals Otis and Schwan will be sought. It is quite certain that they will not be sent until after the middle of June. The department would like if possible to send one of the regiments now in Cuba. It is considered desirable that the soldiers in the Philippines should be as far as possible men [illegible] who will have nothing to learn so that the end that the campaign may be as sharp and short as possible. But no regiments can be taken from Cuba until after the elections at earliest and the elections will not take place until June 16.

AID FOR INDIA

Chicago June 2—It was announced today that the Chicago India famine relief committee has cabled [illegible] to Lady Curzon, wife of the viceroy, to be used in the famine districts. In a letter mailed to Lady Curzon, formerly Mary Leiter of Chicago, it is explained that other cities aided in collecting the amount.

SALISBURY'S RETIREMENT

Is a Possibility Which Causes Much Discussion In London.

BUT IS FAR FROM PROBABLE

Chinese Outbreak Is Not Regarded As Likely to Result in Anything Serious at Present.

(Copyrighted 1900 By Associated Press.)

London June 2—When England is not talking of peace in South Africa and the manner of its accomplishment the topic of the day is the dissolution of parliament and the possible retirement of [illegible] Salisbury.

Sir Howard Vincent writes to the [illegible] that the premier's withdrawal from the field of activity would be nothing less than a calamity for the universe.

The Spectator surmises that Lord Salisbury will give up the ministry of foreign affairs, contenting himself with being premier only, and suggests that Mr Balfour should be given his uncle's portfolio and be made a peer while Mr Chamberlain should succeed the Marquis of Lansdowne as secretary of state for war and become government leader in the house of commons. These hypothetical changes to come after the [illegible] which the Spectator recommends should occur this year, and insists must be followed by a thorough reconstruction of the cabinet.

Other weeklies and dailies also refer to the possibility of Lord Salisbury's retirement.

Inquiries made by the Associated Press [illegible] not the slightest ground for believing that Lord Salisbury contemplates retiring either from the ministry of foreign affairs or the leadership of the party.

A decision on the date of dissolution is still in the air. Mr Chamberlain favors an early appeal to the country [illegible] will not formally discuss the matter until Lord Roberts so shapes the military aspect of South Africa that there cannot be a shadow of doubt as to the completeness of the British victory.

The Chinese question is attracting much public interest here, yet the ravages of the "Boxers" and the landing of British and other armed parties have [illegible] a flutter of excitement. [illegible] the Associated Press learns does not believe the latest outbreak will result in anything serious [illegible] question of the partition of China is a possibility at present considered too remote for any expression of opinion.

NEWS TOPICS WHICH ARE INTERESTING THE GERMANS

(Copyrighted 1900 By Associated Press.)

Berlin June 2—Prince Hohenlohe, the imperial chancellor, gave assurances to an informant of the correspondent of the Associated Press today that the bundesrath in drawing up the paragraphs for the carrying out of the provisions of the meat inspection bill would frame them in such a manner as to consider the legitimate wishes of the American and British governments as far as the tenor of the law will permit.

The chancellor bitterly complained [illegible] Count Von Posadowsky's influence having become paramount even with the minister of foreign affairs, Count Von Buelow. Unfortunately too Dr Von Lucanus, the emperor's private cabinet chief, and Count Von Posadowsky have managed [illegible] meat bill [illegible] a great victory over the Agrarians [illegible].

The Centrist leader Herr Lieber, who [illegible] ill for months and who [illegible] several visits to America, is most [illegible] just returned to the reichstag but is still too weak to reassume the leadership of the Center.

To an Associated Press [illegible] Herr Lieber said he regretted his forced absence as he regarded the terms [illegible] stringent, for he became convinced during his visits to the United States that the slaughtering there was good in every respect and that the meat and [illegible].

The foreign office informed the Associated Press correspondent that the situation in China has improved during the past few days. The Chinese military authorities have shown greater energy and now seem masters of the situation. The foreign office expects the troubles will be quieted without further violence.

The excitement and street riots in Konitz as a result of a murder [illegible] continue in spite of the active measures of the military. Martial law has been proclaimed there. Everybody must leave the streets at 9 p m, and the military has been instructed to use their rifles if again attacked. [illegible] and Commissioner of Police Block were seriously wounded last night by stones.

EFFORT TO SETTLE THE ST. LOUIS STRIKE FAILED

St Louis June 2—Developments in the great street car strike situation caused hope to bound high in the public breast and in many quarters confidence was expressed that the curtain was about to be rung down on the prolonged struggle between capital and labor.

But just as the shades of night were falling the word was passed around that the citizens' committee which has [illegible] adjustment of affairs had failed to consummate [illegible] again hope gave way to bitter disappointment.

[illegible] the citizens' committee submitted a proposition for settlement of the strike to Edward Whitaker, president of the Transit company, and to ex-Governor William J. Stone, attorney for the Railway Men's union, the salient point of which is that the railway company shall agree to restore [illegible] employment not less than 1,000 of its former employes immediately and not less than [illegible] of them within 90 days after the proposition is accepted.

The proposition further provided that as soon as the first thousand have been provided for the company shall re-employ as many men of its former employes as there shall be places for either by reason [illegible] that shall occur or the future extension of the company's business.

This proposition met with the entire approbation of Mr Whitaker and he [illegible] Gov. Stone called [illegible] of the strikers' grievance committee together and they went into secret session to consider the proposition. The conference was a lengthy one [illegible].

Mr Stone stated that the committee had made no progress. He said:

"We have discussed this proposition exhaustively and I want to say right here that the members of the union committee have shown most commendable conservatism and breadth of view in their discussion of the proposition. We reached no conclusion because I desired some information that is absolutely necessary before we can act. I have asked these gentlemen to furnish me this information and they will do so some time tomorrow. I cannot state the nature of this information at this time.

"[illegible] proposition as submitted cannot be accepted [illegible] the point that prevent acceptance, but speaking generally the proposition will have to be changed before we can accept it."

Members of the First Missouri regiment N. G. M. have received orders to report at the armory at 9 o'clock tomorrow.

An attempt was made last night to blow up with dynamite the St. Louis Transit company's barns at Easton and Prairie avenues in which 150 employes [illegible] firemen were asleep and in which were many cars and much valuable property. This was the second attempt to wreck the buildings with dynamite made in three days. The sheds are three in number, all of brick and with high arched slate roofs. They extend from the southeast corner of Easton and Prairie avenues west on Easton avenue to the middle of the block, where the office is located. None of the policemen on the Prairie avenue side of the building saw anything although the explosive was thrown to the roof of the shed from that side. The policemen [illegible] in the Easton shed were thrown violently from their cots by the force of the concussion. Very little damage was [illegible] which shook the surrounding houses and caused great excitement among the residents. It could not be learned who threw the explosive.

BRYAN PREFERS BOERS TO REPUBLICAN CITIZENS

New York June 2—In answer to the World's inquiry to William J. Bryan at Lincoln, Neb., asking his views on the suggestion to invite the Boers to America, he replied:

"The Boers are industrious and intelligent and have shown themselves lovers of liberty. If they lose their fight for independence I hope they will come to the United States. I wish they could come soon [illegible] help save this [illegible] country from the imperialism that is driving them from South Africa. A small part of the money now being expended on a war of conquest would, if spent in reclaiming arid lands, furnish homes for all the Boers and [illegible].

"I wish there were more of them in this country. They could well take the place of a good many Republicans who believe in the imperialistic policy of [illegible]."

VALUABLE CARGO IS TO BE TAKEN TO ALASKA

Seattle Wash June 2—The steamship Charles D. Lane will call for [illegible] tomorrow morning with [illegible] passengers and about [illegible] tons of [illegible] probably the [illegible] north this season. The Lane's most prominent passengers are Charles D. Lane of San Francisco, the owner, and Hon. John H. McGraw, formerly governor of this state.

Mr Lane's is [illegible] the largest and most expensive single outfit ever sent to Alaska from this or any other port. He has 100 men, all employes of the Wild Goose Mining company of which he is the principal stockholder. His freight includes all the rolling stock for a seven mile railroad which the company proposes to build from Nome City to its mines on Anvil, Glacier and Dexter creeks. Besides the railroad equipment there are eight or ten boilers and much milling machinery. The mining machinery outfit is said to be the largest and most complete ever sent to Alaska.

Mr McGraw goes to Nome to assume the duties of United States court commissioner for the district, having been appointed to the office several months ago by the Hon. C. S. Johnson, then judge of the district of Alaska. His official headquarters will be at Nome City.

NEW DIVIDEND PAYER

Acacia Gold Mining Company Will make the First Monthly Payment on June 25.

Special to the Gazette.

Colorado Springs, June 2.—The directors of the Acacia company have declared a one-cent dividend, payable on June 25.

The amount to be distributed is $15,000. It is the first dividend declared by the Acacia company.

The meeting at which this action was determined upon was held some days ago, but no official notice has as yet been made.

The funds in the treasury of the company are such as to warrant the statement that regularly monthly dividends will now be forthcoming.

The Wrockloff lease on the north end of the Burns is developing into a big mine. Grady & Magill, on the main workings, are also producing a large tonnage of high grade mineral. The Morning Star claim, operated by the Bankers' Leasing company, has also an excellent showing. The royalties from these different sets of lessees are sufficient to guarantee dividends for many months to come.

Kitty Arberdeen Wins Road Wagon Event

The race meet is over and the horsemen have left well pleased with Colorado [illegible] with the management of the meet by the Colorado Springs Driving association.

Yesterday's feature was the road wagon event in which all the entries were local horses. It was landed handsomely by Judge Gunnell's Kitty Aberdeen in three straight heats and old horsemen declare [illegible] the [illegible] horse [illegible].

Combatted the Elements.

The inclement weather was no drawback to the crowds that attended the races at Roswell yesterday afternoon. During a greater part of the afternoon there was a drizzling rain that considerably dampened the ardor of the [illegible].

The best finish of the day, and perhaps of the entire meet, was the last race won by MacArthur's Pilot. It was a driving finish between the winner, Interview and Faywood. There was but a neck's difference between the noses of the three leaders and the jockeys were whipping like mad. By the time this race was run the crowd had considerably thinned [illegible] were brought to their feet in the wave of enthusiasm that greeted the plucky little bay, Pilot.

The Road Wagon Race.

The half mile road wagon race in the gentlemen's driving stake was the most interesting to the spectators. The entries were all local horses. There seemed to be little trouble in winning for Kitty Aberdeen, Judge Gunnell's little bay beauty. She won the three straight heats without a waver. She is certainly the best tempered horse that ever took part in a race on the local tracks. M. F. Kaufman's Peter, was just the opposite. He refused to be held down to business and in the third heat ran almost the entire course. H. M. Wilbur's horse, Billy, was an easy second in all of the heats.

In the fourth race there were charges made of crookedness in the manner of [illegible] the jobbing in the bud. The jockeys were undoubtedly guilty of holding up on the favorites. The first intimation that there was anything wrong in the race was when even money was offered on R. Q. Ban by the bookmakers. Friday they were offering fifteen on this horse, and he won in a canter. Yesterday the best heat that he got was third. It was evident from the start that R. Q. Ban was being held in. The decision of the judges was withheld for some time but they finally declared Tiny P. the winner and ordered all bets off. This was the best decision that could be given under the circumstances and was the cause of some satisfaction on the part of the betting fraternity who were not "in on the deal."

The best time that was made yesterday was in the second race, the one mile free-for-all pace. The second heat was paced in 2:17¾. This heat was won by Roberts and was the only heat won by him. In the first he came in second.

After the second race the track became so heavy that fast work was next to impossible. Considering the fact the races went very slow. The most disagreeable thing for the spectators was the starting in the running events. It is hard to tell who was at the fault. Certainly a jockey will hold up a race as long as possible until he can get the position which he wants but it is the duty of the starter to prevent this and to fine the jockeys if necessary.

Altogether the race meet has been a very successful one and the Colorado Springs [illegible] feel proud of what they have accomplished in the bringing together of several strings of good horses that were entered. The following were the results of yesterday [illegible]:

First race, 2:15 pace—Daisy Dean first, three straight; Bill Nye second; Sheeam third; Celest R. fourth. Time, first heat, 2:20½; second heat, 2:21; third heat, 2:20½.

Second race, free-for-all pace—Aelse, first; Roberts second; E. S. third. Time, first heat 2:20½; second heat, 2:17¾; third heat, 2:22½; fourth heat, 2:19½.

Third race, half mile road wagon—Kitty [illegible] second; Brother third. Time, first heat, 1:19; second heat 1:15; third heat 1:17.

Fourth race, half mile dash—Tiny P. first; La Fontera second; R. Q. Ban third. Time :51.

Fifth race, one mile—Torreno first; Cousin Lettie second; Mickle third. Time 1:51½.

Sixth race, ⅝ mile dash—Pilot first; Interview second; Sunday W. third. Time 1:05.

Golden Remains to Worry the Tiger

Colorado College 12
State University 1

The State University met its second [illegible] and the nine men who donned the uniform for a contest with the Colorado College Tigers left the city last night with a score of 12 to 1 against them.

It was a good game despite the one-sidedness of the score and for at least four or probably six innings the outcome was in doubt. The crowd in attendance numbered about 750. The rain was doubtless responsible for the smallness of the crowd.

[illegible] Play Next Week

Boulder having been beaten twice, all interest centers now in the final and deciding game with the Miners of Golden which occurs on Washburn field next Saturday afternoon. The winning of this game by the college means a tie for the [illegible] and championship honors will doubtless go to the team which wins the last struggle.

Yesterday's game was of interest in that by losing it the college would be out of the race.

The Game.

The college went to the bat first and [illegible] men had fanned and another had fouled out. Herr finally got on bases [illegible] single by Packard but the latter went out at second. Boulder failed to get beyond second base. In the [illegible] a wild throw from right field to the home plate netted two runs for the Tigers and a passed ball allowed another man to cross the plate. Boulder managed to get three men on bases and an error allowed Barber to score.

[illegible] for each team, and the fourth resulted likewise. In the fifth the college scored twice after two men were out. Lamson [illegible] Jones' liner and Meigs went out from pitcher to first. Then Cox's single and Herr followed with the longest drive of the day, scoring Cox and reaching third himself. Packard singled and Herr scored but Cooley shattered the air for naught. Boulder reached second twice in this inning but got no farther. In the sixth Davis fouled out, Jonson fanned, Holt walked but Jones flew out. For Boulder, Wardenburg fanned, Barber flew out [illegible] and Whitehead flew out to Holt. Wardenburg got rattled in the seventh, and Cox and Herr got safe on bases on his poor work. Packard drove to right field and Cox and Herr scored. Cooley missed the ball three times and Davis went out from Lamson to Wardenburg. Boulder didn't reach first. Jones struck Vinton out and Cooley threw Reynolds out at first and caught McMurray's fly. The eighth saw Gearin reach first on a hit but he died there. A wild throw and a hit enabled Lamson to reach third. Wardenburg bunted out a pretty double from Cox to Davis to Packard got the batter out at first and Lamson out at home without a score. Three hits, a couple of fumbles and a base on balls netted the college four runs in the ninth. Four men came to bat for Boulder and one reached second but the other three were unfortunate and the game was over.

Some of the Features.

The college put up a good game. Four errors were made but they were not costly. Jones pitched a fine game. He was in the box for seven innings and was as strong in the seventh as in the first. He came out with a record of seven strike-outs, having given but two bases on balls and allowing only three hits. Gearin went in in the eighth just to warm up. He struck out one man, allowed one hit and gave one base on balls. Reynolds, the Boulder south-paw, had eight Tigers fanning the breezes, Captain Cooley being his easiest prey. He was not as steady as Jones and he presented the Tigers with six promenades and the college touched him up for twelve hits. Packard played in A No. 1 form and his throwing to bases was particularly accurate. The combination on second base worked very satisfactory. There were two star plays of the game and they were gems of the first brilliance. In the fourth inning Jonson made a [illegible] He made a long run from the center of his territory in left field to the bushes south of the field and took in the sailing sphere prettily. The other star play was the double in the third. Lamson was on third and Wardenburg bunted. Cox [illegible] the ball and after bluffing [illegible] Lamson started to go in but Davis whirled the sphere to Packard and Lamson was out.

For Boulder Vinton and Lamson played the best game. Vinton's work in left field was very good and cut off several runs. Lamson, who is well known and very popular in this city, took all chances. He used to play with the college team and the Tigers still call him "One Dick." Howard, another old Colorado college man, played a good game at short. It was better battery work and hitting that brought the college out victor.

Following is the detailed score of the game:

Colorado Col. ....1 3 0 0 2 0 2 0 4—12
U. of C. ....0 1 0 0 0 0 0 0 0—1

BELLEVUE BALL GAME NETTED $155.95

The statement of the managers of the Bellevue Sanatorium baseball game played Decoration day between the railroad employes of the D. and R. G. and Rock Island and the Colorado and Southern and Santa Fe has been issued.

It shows the amount of money to be turned [illegible] to be $155.95 which is $50 more than was reported on the evening after the game.

This money will be applied by the Sanatorium management to paying for the equipment of the operating room. It will go far toward completing the fund now in hand for that purpose.

MICHIGAN BY HALF A POINT

[illegible] collegiate Athletic championship was won by the University of Michigan track and field team at Ravenswood field today after the most closely contested meet in the history of the association. There was only half a point difference between the total scores of Michigan and Chicago when the last event had been decided, with California but one and a half points behind Chicago and it took the last event, the 220-yard hurdles, in which athletes of those three institutions fought for supremacy, to decide the championship. The points scored were as follows:

Michigan 31; Chicago 30½, California 29, Wisconsin 21; Notre Dame 17, Northwestern 6, Knox college 4½; Minnesota 3, Nebraska 2.

Teams from nineteen western colleges and universities competed in the sixteen track and field events carded and though the cinder paths were anything but fast and a cold north wind put the thinly clad university athletes at a disadvantage, yet four western intercollegiate records were broken, including one track and three field events. One of these, big Plaw, [illegible] on a private trial, broke the world's record for the hammer throw, easily established new western records for the hammer throw and shot put. Dvoorak of Michigan established a new record in the pole vault and Bredsteen, without [illegible] mile walk record. In the other track events, however, the time was slow.

SIOUX CITY FRANCHISE WILL BE RETAINED

Sioux City, June 2.—The meeting of the Western Baseball league magnates [illegible]. The Sioux City franchise will not be transferred to St. Paul, but will remain here. Manager Beal will secure a down town park.

Manager Chase of Des Moines has agreed to abide by the decision of the National League Board and use the Spaulding ball, and the members of the league have petitioned the national board to have the games played with the Chase ball stand as they are.

WEEK AT MANITOU

Memorial day was observed in a most fitting manner at Manitou last Wednesday. The [illegible] were held at the high school building were attended by a large number of patriotic citizens. Among the special features of the program were the musical numbers. A solo was sung by Miss Annie Day and the choir of the Congregational church [illegible] Willis, Inez and Edo Lowther.

Mr. H. H. Grafton was the principal speaker of the occasion. His address was one of the most interesting of its kind ever given in Manitou. He spoke quite generally of the history of Memorial day and he called particular attention to its present significance. He said that people should be especially mindful on Memorial day of their duties and [illegible].

After the exercises the old soldiers and the members of the Women's Relief Corps together with a large number of friends went to the cemetery where the graves of ten old soldiers were decorated.

A party of pleasure seekers went from the St. Elmo hotel to Crystal Park Tuesday morning to spend the day. Among those in the party were Mrs. Flora Lee, Mr. Elmer Henning, [illegible] Miss Anna McDonald, Miss Sylvia Fellows.

The Manitou town council will hold a meeting next Tuesday evening.

Mr. C. W. Barker returned yesterday morning from a few days' business visit in Denver. He is making arrangements to open his hotel for the coming season. The work of overhauling the hotel was commenced yesterday. It will be opened for the season about [illegible].

The bath house is undergoing a thorough overhauling in preparation for the coming season. A new floor is being put in the plunge and a new toboggan is being installed to take the place of the old one. Mr. Moreland states that it will be opened as soon as the people demand it.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Dick of Chicago and Mr. and Mrs. R. Dick of Denver, are in Manitou to spend several days. They are guests at the Norris house.

Dr. D. S. Dearborn and brother O. L. Dearborn, of Milford, New Hampshire, are registered at the Norris house.

A crowd of young people went up the cog road last Wednesday morning to spend the day. They all took lunches and had a most enjoyable time. Among those in the party were Misses Ethel Frazier, May Ward, Vida Taylor, Sylvia Fellows, Alberta Rucker, Myrtle Frazier, Laura Henson, Hope Vezie, Ella Long, Messrs. Frank Davidson, A. J. Caldwell, Will Paulson, W. Bradt, Hal Ross, Ralph Brown, Dr. Rich and W. A. Neely.

Mr. H. J. Anslie of Cripple Creek, is in Manitou for a few days' stay. He is a guest at the Cliff house.

Mrs. Geo. M. Walker was in Manitou for a few days during the first of the week.

Mr. W. C. Witherill, wife and child, and Mr. Howard C. Murphy, of Joplin, Mo., [illegible]. Mr. Witherill is extensively interested in lead and zinc mines in that district.

BLATCHFORD KAVANAGH SINGS HERE IN JULY

Blatchford Kavanagh, who in the closing years of the eighties earned the title of the "Boy Patti," and who commanded [illegible] to be heard in Colorado Springs on the evening of Friday, July 13, in the Temple theater, and on the afternoon of the next day.

The concert is for the benefit of the Y. M. C. A. building and will undoubtedly be one of the biggest events of a musical nature ever held in Colorado Springs.

Kavanagh is now a baritone. He travels under the management of Mr. Henry B. Roney, who brought him out as a boy soprano in 1888 and who has always been and still is his only teacher and manager.

Kavanagh is starring with "Roney's Boys," a quartette consisting of Master Harry Cockrell, soprano, 10 years; Master Jamie Crippen, mezzo soprano, 11 years; Master Arthur Goff, cornetist, 10 years; Master Francis Murphy, contralto, 13 years; Mr. Henry B. Roney, concert organist.

The company carries a very unusually fine line of press notices and is undoubtedly one of the most pleasing musical organizations on the road.

EASTERN MARKETS

New York Money Market.

New York, June 2.—Money on call easy at [illegible] per cent; prime mercantile paper 3½@4½ per cent.

Sterling exchange steady with actual business in bankers bills at $4.87¾@4.87¼ for demand and $4.84½ for 60 days, posted rates $4.85½ and $4.88½; commercial bills $4.83@4.84.

State bonds inactive; railroad bonds irregular; government bonds weak.

New York Stocks.

New York, June 2.—[illegible] there was manifest hesitation in the trend of prices of stocks today, and a doubt was disclosed whether the upward movement was not to prove abortive.

American securities got practically no support in the London market where dullness reigned in anticipation of Whitsuntide holidays.

The iron and steel industries were conspicuous sufferers on the depressing opinions regarding the trade outlook. Sugar was comparatively dull. The bank statement proved disappointing in some items and mystifying in others and turned sentiment towards reaction, the closing being heavy and unsettled on a declining scale.

Chicago Cattle.

Chicago, June 2.—There was no news of great importance. The spark of life in the wheat market was very feeble. Speculators have a habit of doing very little on Saturday and today with Liverpool closed, they were still less inclined to bestir themselves. The market opened firm because it was reported that the Northwest needed more rain, but lapsed into general stagnation and the relative weakness of northwest markets helped it along.

The corn market was quiet but firm.

[illegible]

Provisions were firm as to meats and weak as respects lard.

The Coffee Market.

New York, June 2.—The market for coffee futures opened steady at unchanged prices and closed steady at net unchanged prices to five points decline. Total sales 9,250 bags.

OWNERS OF DIXON PARK OFFER TO IMPROVE THE LAND AND SELL TO THE CITY FOR $25,000

The proposition from the owners of Dixon Park Place to the city [illegible] for the purchase of the [illegible] property [illegible] proval [illegible] addition [illegible] already [illegible] ations to be a [illegible] be a [illegible] those of the [illegible].

The proposition has been submitted to the city [illegible] forms. In the first [illegible] several landscape [illegible] other labor [illegible] state for the purposes [illegible] proposed [illegible] be done [illegible] be the present owners [illegible] proposed.

For $25,000 Improved.

This [illegible] the placing of the grounds in shape by the present owners [illegible] but will make of Dixon Park Place [illegible] state. The price to the city with the improvements will be $25,000 and will [illegible].

The improvements that are contemplated are such that the land will, when [illegible] have the appearance of a public park, and not the appearance of raw land as it has at the present time. No one who has gone to the proposed park site and looked it over has any hesitancy in asserting that the city could not take [illegible] location as convenient [illegible] that would contain the [illegible] shrubbery, the pines and the cottonwoods, the creek with its foaming and roaring waters and the faultless topography of the ground that is found in this tract of 30 acres.

The owners of the land are anxious to [illegible] Another feature that has not previously been considered in connection [illegible] is a spring in the park property. During the past three years this spring has been covered by the soil that has been washed over it by the rains and melting snow. When [illegible] The natural location of the property is one of the factors that commends it [illegible] favorable consideration [illegible] It is in one of the most [illegible] spots in the whole Rocky mountain range and commands [illegible] obstruct [illegible] view of the mountains on [illegible] In summer it is always [illegible] and the vegetation is always [illegible] protected from the [illegible] storms of the winter on all sides.

The Second Proposition.

To the Honorable Mayor and City Council of the City of Colorado Springs, Colorado, and to the Committee on Public Grounds of Said [illegible]:

In pursuance of a certain park proposition recently submitted to your honorable body by the undersigned, the following additional and specific proposition is respectfully submitted:

1. It is stipulated that the tract of land described in the proposition heretofore submitted shall be conveyed to the city, with clear title, for the sum of $25,000.

2. For said price the grantors agree [illegible] in good park condition, forthwith, by fencing the same, clearing the ground of dead wood, debris, etc., the building of at least three rustic bridges [illegible] the stream (Cheyenne creek), the building of gravel walks as per plat, leading into and through the park, the grading of Ellis avenue along the electric line throughout the tract, the building of a pavilion in the park, the placing of 50 rustic benches in the park. The grantors also agree to put in a drinking fountain in said park.

Respectfully [illegible]

N. M. CAMPBELL,
On behalf of the owners.

HAS CLEAN "LINEN" BUT PAYS NO LAUNDRY BILLS

Shirts, three for 10 cents, neckties four for a nickel, cuffs free. This is no Chinese laundry advertisement, nor a bargain store [illegible] what a well known gentleman about town pays for his linen and he has a change every day or two, some days [illegible] changes. He doesn't wear just what would be called [illegible] but it is its first [illegible].

"I discovered it while traveling [illegible] I got caught without [illegible] and was a long way from [illegible] that way. [illegible] I just pasted the [illegible] of some pasteboard cuffs like these cut out a little bib and [illegible] to make the bosom and there you are. I have been wearing them ever since, about seven years. For 10 cents I get enough goods for three bibs and three pair of cuffs and can have a change every few days. [illegible] and then put on a bib. Ties, I get pretty much the same way. For a nickel I get enough goods for four string ties and cut and paste them myself. Now don't tell anybody my name and I'll show you my stock."

Opening a lower drawer in his desk he exhibited twenty or thirty bibs cut out and ready for pasting on his white shirts. When these bibs get dirty he tears them from the shirt. There were pasteboard cuffs covered with goods to match the bibs, until you couldn't rest, and a profusion of ties.

And this man is supposed to be worth $100,000.

High School

Do you realize that Commencement is almost at hand? And have you decided what you shall give your friends who graduate this year?

Why not try the new Book, Stationery and Art Store for Commencement presents? There is nothing after all quite so suitable and so enduring as a picture or a book. We have a very choice line of both. We doubt if any store in town has so many pretty things suitable for Commencement Season.

We have dainty books and finer volumes from 25c to $5.00 each. We have choice pictures from $1 to $15 each. We have just received some new goods expressly for our Commencement trade.

Colorado Springs Citizens on The Annexation Proposition

Shall Colorado City be annexed to Colorado Springs? What the following citizens of Colorado Springs have to say on the subject:

Mayor J. R. Robinson.
Postmaster L. C. Dana.
Alderman J. C. St. John.
[illegible]
[illegible] Humphrey.
Police Captain Sherman McNew.

"Shall Colorado City be annexed to Colorado Springs?" The interviews which were published in the Gazette a day or two ago on [illegible] Colorado Springs and Colorado City have alike been experiencing during the past few years a [illegible] destined to continue with each year. The two cities now adjoin each other and have a multiplicity of interests [illegible].

The [illegible] people of Colorado City have expressed themselves as ready [illegible] to be annexed [illegible] likely to be opposed. The greatest question involved is the question of the abolition of the saloon in Colorado City, and most of the people of that place state that they have never thought of such a thing as taking into Colorado Springs [illegible].

The consensus of opinion in Colorado Springs may be summed up in the following:

Colorado City has more to gain by annexation than has Colorado Springs. Colorado City would secure increased advantages in school affairs and in postal service by annexation.

Colorado City would not have to maintain a city government of its own and would pay less [illegible] maintaining the Colorado Springs government than it now pays for its own [illegible] credit and a pride to Colorado Springs.

Colorado City has saloons which Colorado Springs would not tolerate and a certain number of a class of people who are very undesirable and of whom it would be difficult to rid the place.

[illegible] ed [illegible] but thinks that the time is [illegible] not yet quite ripe.

[illegible] of the city think of the question [illegible]

MAYOR J. R. ROBINSON.

"[illegible] subject for publication," said the mayor. "I am in favor of annexation [illegible] time if certain things can be brought about [illegible] it is a little premature at the present time. I am unequivocally opposed to the annexation of Colorado City on moral grounds. By that I mean that if the city means to come into Colorado Springs and still retain its saloons and other centers of immorality, I am [illegible] that it would be possible to eradicate these evils [illegible] would not be continually troubling us [illegible] at present.

"[illegible] a natural thing to look forward to. I may say that I believe it will come in the course [illegible] that the time is yet ripe. There are a great many citizens of Colorado City who would be a great credit to Colorado Springs and I wish we might have the pleasure [illegible] feeling that they were fellow-citizens [illegible] city could have and I could not approve anything [illegible] might [illegible]."

POSTMASTER L. C. DANA.

[illegible] Postmaster Dana. "I have long been in favor of the annexation of Colorado City and I think that from the standpoint of the postoffice department it is particularly desirable.

"The advantages which would be [illegible] as the postoffice is concerned might be [illegible] The free delivery system could be instituted [illegible] The [illegible] of the Colorado City postoffice in that event would be that of a substation under the Colorado Springs office. The assistant superintendent of the free delivery service and the fourth assistant postmaster general have been here recently and have looked over the ground and both are heartily in favor [illegible]

"I think the two towns would get [illegible] together and that the interests of both [illegible] in a short time would be better served if they were under one government."

ALDERMAN J. C. ST. JOHN.

[illegible]

POLICE CAPTAIN McNEW.

Police Captain Sherman McNew was with Mr. St. John when the latter was talking and he agreed with the sentiments of Mr. St. John. "It would mean a larger police force for Colorado Springs," said the captain, "and we would probably have to establish a station over there and also a fire station, but it would pay.

"[illegible] right now," continued the captain, "Mayor George is trying to do his [illegible] better than it ever was before. He [illegible] what he is doing though if he didn't have a pretty good man to [illegible] and efficient marshal even if he is young. They have got things pretty well in hand over there and with the [illegible] I don't believe the saloon question would cause a great deal of trouble."

H. H. GRAFTON AND J. F. HUMPHREY.

Messrs. Grafton and Humphrey were found talking in front of the [illegible] building the other day and were asked what they thought of the proposed annexation.

"I think," said Mr. Grafton, "that it would be better for the annexation to come gradually. I think the school districts could be combined very advantageously and thus the people of Colorado City would thus be brought into [illegible] Springs and the annexation of [illegible] interests. The school interests should [illegible] under one board.

"I think that Mr. Grafton's suggestion is a good one," said Mr. Humphrey. "The schools of Colorado City would certainly be able to secure more advantages if they were under the Colorado Springs school board and I am inclined to believe that even the members of the Colorado City board would favor an annexation of their school district to ours. The greatest point in the case would be that the people of Colorado City would then have the privileges of the Colorado [illegible] now have."

Little trouble with the saloon question if it got into the Colorado Springs council. It is a tight scratch for a drug store to get a license in this town now and it would be a tighter one for a saloon to get a license in Colorado City from the Colorado Springs council. Of course I don't know who will be elected [illegible] next year or who will be mayor but I don't believe the saloon would live very long in Colorado City if we got a hold of it."

FIRST NATIONAL BANK BLOCK

Shot Through the Hat by St. Louis Strikers

"See that bullet hole?" queried [illegible] of Harry Gardner, one of th[illegible] last night. "I'm going [illegible] this hat as long as it will last." He took off a black derby and pointed [illegible] small oblong hole in the brim next [illegible] the low.

"I got that in the St. Louis street car [illegible] morning [illegible] left for the coast. I have lived [illegible] so long out on Chautauqua av[illegible] [illegible] I expected all the strikers would [illegible] me and not molest me if I rode [illegible] down with such men. But I came [illegible] losing my life and if that strike is [illegible] ever when I get back I'll use [illegible] when I ride."

Mr. [illegible] is too corpulent a [illegible] to ride a wheel.

"Tuesday morning I started for down[illegible] in spite of the transit company's [illegible] in warning persons of the danger [illegible] strikers, which are [illegible] every[illegible] only to be regularly torn down [illegible] pieces. We had not gone far [illegible] ugly looking strikers began to [illegible]

"The presence of six armed guards in the car did not awe the strikers, and when we reached a little cross street [illegible] before the business portion was [illegible] crowd of perhaps [illegible] lined [illegible] across the track. They bluffed at the motorman, but he would not stop. Half a dozen of them remained on the track until the [illegible] was within a few feet of them before jumping aside.

"There was the usual result. If the car had stopped the strikers would have taken it, and as it was they tried it pretty hard. The motorman was shot through the cheek, one of the guards was wounded in an arm and I got this bullet through my hat just as I turned on the seat to the floor. It was a car with two closed compartments besides the middle vestibule at the side entrance. There were about 18 people aboard all told. Those I mentioned were the only ones hit by bullets, but no less than 30 shots hit the car. The ball that struck me went through a window and my hat and passed out through another glass. One of the strikers was said to have been wounded by a guard, but our car dashed by in a whirl and and got away.

"It is dangerous to ride [illegible] St. Louis street cars, but I didn't appreciate it until Tuesday. However hundreds of cars run every day without [illegible]

"What they need is troops to patrol the lines in large numbers and open up on obstreperous strikers. The better thinking element among them does not participate in the rioting."

Mr. [illegible] is en route to Pasadena, Calif., where he has fruit interests. He is a St. Louis tea merchant.

Starched Campaign Will Be a Stiff One

The Y. M. C. A. was besieged with [illegible] who wanted to enlist [illegible] army [illegible] the disposal of 7,700 boxes of starch for the benefit of the building fund. The names [illegible] boys were taken and each boy [illegible] up as to his probable qualifications for the work wanted.

[illegible] boys to [illegible] the boys to [illegible] years [illegible] [illegible] ready to apply and they being [illegible] qualified for the work. The boys [illegible] enthusiastically [illegible] the [illegible] be looked for [illegible] delivered [illegible] good advice [illegible] the boys presented themselves. Some of them straggled in and dragged their [illegible] along [illegible] gave the advice that they brace up and walk straight or they would not do very well at selling starch.

Some of the boys came with very dirty hands. Mr. Day greeted them cordially, but told the particular ones that a boy who couldn't keep his hands clean would not do very well at selling starch.

In the meantime the 7,800 boxes of starch [illegible] in the [illegible] of the room and the boys cast longing glances in that direction. They were told that when they started [illegible]

"It's the only starch that [illegible] the market. It requires no boiling and is warranted to stiffen anything from from a collar to a house and lot."

Ohioan May Locate in Colorado Springs

A gentleman [illegible] stature and [illegible] leaned [illegible] in a big chair at the Alta Vista [illegible] night and scanned over and over [illegible] a letter he had just written [illegible] sealing and posting it.

"That letter may make a big change in my life," he said. "It may lead my [illegible] that I have decided [illegible] come to Colorado Springs [illegible] transfer my interests and [illegible] does it will tell them just how I feel about it."

If this man does take the contemplated step it will be to the credit [illegible] of Colorado Springs as much as [illegible] man of sterling business integrity could contribute. The writer of the letter mentioned is M. C. Price, president and treasurer of the Edna Organ and Piano company, with the [illegible] factory at Monroeville, Ohio [illegible] to W. M. Price, the [illegible]

The Edna piano is not as well known as the Steinway and some others, but the Edna organs lead and the success of the concern is largely due to the untiring energy of Mr. Price.

"I want the glorious freedom of the west," he continued, "the spirit has caught me and I will not surprise my [illegible] if I dispose of my interests in [illegible] and come here to join an energetic band of business men [illegible] [illegible] old communities back east a [illegible] man has no business [illegible] I am not young in years but since I came here and found such a contrast to what I believed Colorado [illegible] I am half determined [illegible] my fortune with the future of [illegible] I [illegible] see your business men, [illegible] unparalleled push and briskness [illegible] methods, nearly all of them successful to a remarkable degree, makes [illegible] regret to turn his face homeward.

"Twenty years ago I thought from reports that this would be a good place to cast lots in, but I stayed at home. The future now looks better than I believe [illegible] have developed to my satisfaction that the scores of millionaires here were made by the locality. Their wealth was created by the mines and real estate, and it seems that Colorado Springs is one of the most thoroughly self made cities in the world and doubtless the richest of its size. There is confidence in the future written in every block and [illegible] of the district. Railroads are not given to risking money on uncertainties and their work alone between this city and Cripple Creek and about the district is convincing.

"So far I have found the most hospitable business men of any communities I have ever visited. Colorado Springs offers an inducement in this fact alone that is of inestimable value. And my research has developed only the best educational and other facilities [illegible] generally thought to be lacking by the eastern people.

"But the [illegible] is an all [illegible] feature. If it puts new life into the system, makes the brain active and creates additional ambition and energy, it is worth a fortune to any man. No man can say he has enough of these if he is in business for gain."

"Is there really a good chance of your locating here?" the visitor asked of Mr. Price.

"To be sure there is," he replied heartily. "While my interests in the east are pretty extensive I can easily unload if I decide to do so and in the latter case would come here to invest [illegible]"

Mr. Price was a schoolmate of F. F. Rohs and [illegible] other [illegible] here and at Manitou who were former Ohioans.

FOR IMPROVEMENT OF THE EAST SIDE

An unusually interesting meeting of the East Side Improvement association was held at Mr. [illegible] on East Platte Friday evening last and new life was manifest. [illegible] general discussion of the needs and desires of the East siders. The residents of East Boulder street desire to have a grade established [illegible] interest of all residents from the Santa Fe railroad eastward. As lots are being [illegible] will with the advent of an electric car line bring this part of our city to the front in the rapid growth which as a residential part stands second to no other [illegible] finished work on East Platte avenue was discussed and a committee appointed to see that the proper ditch boxes were placed in order to save the street from wasting of the irrigating water.

[illegible] Charles Collis [illegible] to the interest and the best wishes of all will go with him as he seeks a return to health in the east.

The meeting adjourned to meet with President J. E. Cox on Jun 15.

"There's absolutely nobody in town but [illegible] remarked a hotel [illegible] "The travel from California has about ceased and everybody east and south is waiting for the cheap rates on June [illegible] Just now it's a lull between [illegible] season, but we will all wish the lull [illegible] before many weeks and that [illegible] hotel like it [illegible] the [illegible] best we have ever had. Railroads have [illegible] rate [illegible] for the round trip from everywhere to [illegible] Springs and the people are waiting for it to open."

"In speaking of the success of the local government administration at Colorado City Mr. Charles J. Cunningham said: "Modesty is a thing usually unknown to political [illegible] still I should much rather leave this task to the observation of the newspaper correspondent himself.

"I will say this much however that without reference to my own position I feel well satisfied with the efforts of [illegible] both those [illegible] and appointed. And I should [illegible] to state here that some of the holdover members of the council are manifesting a very commendable spirit especially in the matter of financial reform. Should my friend Ernest Wescott hold to his present gait throughout the year [illegible] be entitled to the enviable title 'Watch dog of the treasury.'

"The moral reforms inaugurated while yet somewhat imperfect are progressing in a manner quite satisfactory to those interested in the movement. You see it has been scarcely two months since the new administration took charge of the city's affairs, and consequently is rather early to write its history. But if everything moves along as now indicated I believe the majority of the people of Colorado City will be satisfied with results."

GRANITE HILL AND MARGERY

Two Interesting Suits Filed in District Court.

MANIPULATION OF STOCKS

Complaints Allege That in Two Instances One Man Succeeded in Getting Control of a Property and Running it for His Own Interests With Little Money

Two suits were filed in the district court yesterday which are likely to attract a great deal of attention among mining men, [illegible] the [illegible] some of [illegible] of mining deals. On [illegible] and N. Fonbeliser [illegible] the Granite Hill Mining and Milling company, W. S. Stratton, C. W. Kurie, J. H. Gowdy and W. H. Gowdy, J. P. Madden, Joseph Ryan, W. R. Barnes and M. Kinney as individuals and as the directors of the Granite Hill company.

The other suit is brought by the members of the firm of Tucker, Ballard & Co. and the members of the firm of Shove, Aldrich & Co. and W. F. Prenave, Percy Hagerman, M. Garath and H. A. Young versus H. A. McIntyre, the Margery Gold Mining company, W. S. Stratton, W. H. McIntyre, Frank Fish, Frederick A. Williams, James F. Lindsay, Clyde Turnbull, trustee, and the International Trust company.

The suits are very similar in character, the deals involved in the two being almost identical. The complaint in the latter suit alleges that the Margery [illegible] is the owner of the May Be So, Telephone, Blue Bird, Kansas and Starlight lode claims and that some time ago W. S. Stratton wanted to buy the May Be So and the Telephone lodes; that he employed H. A. McIntyre as his agent to procure the properties and allowed the latter to expend [illegible] whatever portion he needed of $[illegible] It is further alleged that the said H. A. McIntyre secured 475,000 shares of Margery stock at 7½ cents, which would have been $[illegible] for the entire property of the company. It is alleged that by securing the said 475,000 shares of stock he secured the control of the company and caused W. H. McIntyre, [illegible] Williams and James Lindsay to be elected members of the board of directors, leaving the fifth place on the board vacant; that Fish, Williams and Lindsay had no interest whatever in the stock of the company, and that each was given one share in order to qualify him to do business as a director; that on May 11 the Margery company, by its board of directors, sold the May Be So and Telephone lodes to W. S. Stratton for $70,000, the conveyance being made to Clyde Turnbull as trustee.

The complaint alleges that the three directors to whom was given one share each had no interest in the company and prays that a receiver be appointed to take charge of the affairs of the company; that the sale of the two lode claims to Turnbull, trustee, be set aside by the court; that H. A. McIntyre be enjoined from selling or in any manner disposing of the remainder of the properties of the Margery company and that the directors McIntyre, [illegible]

We Realize the Fact that we have too many Wash Goods. Owing to the unseasonable weather the demand has not been equal to the supply. This forces the prices down. Our entire stock marked at prices to move it quickly. You choose from the largest collection in town and save a neat margin in the choosing. Below we tell of some of the Special Offerings For This Week:

Irish Dimities Fine sheer fabric in new designs and figures—goods that launder perfectly and make dainty, pretty waists or dresses. A low retail price for this fabric is 25c; we make a special price this week for, per yard.. 17c

Shamrock Dimities Not so good as the first, but a fabric sold in many stores for 25c a yard. The patterns and styles are all new and desirable. We have made a leader of these at 20c. Now they are marked down to, per yard.............. 15c

Domestic Dimities A big variety of patterns in this number, styles that look as well as the higher cost ones. They are all new this season. 15c has been the selling price, but now they are reduced to, per yard.............. 10c

Scotch Ginghams 50 pieces in this lot, checks, stripes and fancys, best goods made for the regular 25c price. They are a decided snap at this week's price of, per yard.............. 15c

INDIA LINONS This week's prices on India Linons are 15 to 25 per cent lower than you can buy them anywhere in a regular way. Our India Linons were bought last year at prices much below the wholesale market today. A look will convince you of the extraordinary values.

Tales of the Town

The sight to which some people will [illegible] the office the other day. The small boy entered the local room and said to the man who has charge of the "Buttonhole" column: "Say, do you want a good button?" [illegible]

[illegible]

A few days ago a very pleasant appearing lady called at the money order window of the postoffice, and asked for an application for a money order. Assistant Postmaster Edmundson was at the window, it being during the noon hour, and to another gentleman who was standing near him the assistant postmaster said:

"Did you notice what a pleasant manner that lady has? I don't know who she is, but she is the kind of a person that it is a pleasure to deal with. I take her to be a lady who knows how [illegible] and who takes it for granted that some of the people she has to deal with are ladies and gentlemen. She speaks as though she [illegible] good service in most anything. Some folks kick at postoffice employes just because they are postoffice employes, like some people kick at a railroad company just because it is a railroad company. Now I don't believe that lady would kick about anything unless she had a good reason for it."

By this time the pleasant lady had filled out her application and was back at the window. She did not kick about anything, but in the same sweet voice that she had used before said:

"Where did you people get that onion-colored ink?"

She had dipped her pen in the mucilage.

A man who spent a few weeks in Colorado Springs recently contracted a severe cold while here. The lady at whose boarding house he lived [illegible] something for his cold, but he was of a vigorous constitution and not accustomed to having colds and considered it unnecessary to do anything for it. [illegible] and when he was suffering with the cold [illegible] take a [illegible] recover [illegible] not do this. [illegible] Finally as a last [illegible]

[illegible] but she told him that she would see [illegible] a hot water bottle which he [illegible] and that he should sleep with his head upon the same. [illegible] would use it. He placed it upon his pillow and placed his head upon it [illegible] The water saturated the pillow [illegible] The night was very wet outside and it [illegible] When the sleeper awoke at 9 o'clock [illegible] his head and shoulders [illegible] with water upon a cold, wet pillow. He went into the house and took the water bottle, and thanked the lady for her interest in him. He declined absolutely, however, to accept any further treatment and the next day his cold in the head had entirely disappeared.

A story is told of a young man in this city who was recently a sufferer from stomach trouble. [illegible] physician and asked for advice. The physician [illegible] and specified horseback riding as desirable.

The young man went out and got a horse and [illegible] [illegible]

What Two Men Think of Proposed Sanitarium On the Glockner Site

[illegible] negotiations are practically closed for the sale of the Glockner sanitarium property from the Sisters of Charity to a syndicate of Colorado Springs men represented in the deal by Mr. E. S. Kinney. The property has not yet changed hands but an option has been given for a consideration in the neighborhood of $50,000, and there is a certainty that it will be taken up.

Means a New Building.

The sale of the sanitarium will be followed by the erection of a [illegible] building, which will be devoted to the purposes of a big first class sanitarium, which will cater to the wealthy people of the country. The plans for the building are made, it having been [illegible] Anderson, and the proposed building is intended to carry out Dr. Anderson's idea in the matter.

Dr. Anderson's Opinion.

Dr. B. P. Anderson has written numerous articles for magazines and newspapers on the climatic conditions of Colorado Springs and in the course of such work has naturally studied the conditions. He said of the proposed sanitarium yesterday:

"Colorado Springs is losing far more than the people appreciate because of the lack of inducements for the share of the invalids of the United States. Every year in the United States there are 100,000 invalids who leave their homes for health resorts and this city does not get as many in proportion as other resorts of the same size and having no altitude climate. Of this number of invalids, 100,000 are consumptives and if we draw them here by offering the desired accommodations a large per cent would remain permanently. The invalids have built up Colorado; they have made an empire of it and no city in the state shows it better than Colorado Springs. A large per cent of our best buildings as well as small homes have been built by invalids and a fair proportion of the mining development of Cripple Creek is due to them. They help the stocks, the brokers and every other class of business man. I know of one eastern millionaire, who came here not long ago [illegible] during his short stay [illegible] can point out several others [illegible] who are well known throughout the state who have come here to get the benefit of the climate and who have invested heavily [illegible] enough to know that a permanent [illegible] the wisest plan to pursue and [illegible] the class for which we need [illegible] improvements in our artificial inducements [illegible]

"We have the sun, the diffusive [illegible] in the air and atmospheric qualities [illegible] And in the thirty-one years that I have practiced here I have [illegible] case of consumption that developed here. There could not be a [illegible] natural condition and what [illegible] such as is suggested and proper advertising. We are not advertised half as well as the majority of resorts. [illegible] schools, the environments and other things conducive to the happiness of the intellectual, and found it in Colorado Springs is the most hospitable [illegible] in the country and everybody ought to know it. As it is, those who [illegible] our advertising matter see nothing in the way of a sanitarium calculated to offer an attractive, comfortable home life, with amusements and conditions generally desired by the better class of people.

"[illegible] at least [illegible] per cent of the vast army of invalids seeking health away from home. If we got that it would mean [illegible] per cent, and we would have [illegible] of them. Now, just imagine what a benefit it would be for the city to gain such a population. Bear in mind what invalids have done for the city.

"There were some [illegible] people [illegible] health, but few of them were improving to any great extent. An altitude [illegible] what [illegible] were at hand."

By Mr. D. B. Fairley.

Mr. [illegible] one of the men who is understood to be interested financially in the proposed sanitarium [illegible]

"Yes, I am in favor of the erection of a sanitarium on the site and am willing to become interested to the extent of putting in some money.

"I have always favored the idea and think that it is one of the best business [illegible] at the present time. It is even better than it would have been ten or fifteen years ago because there are advantages in the city now which [illegible] There are things to entertain the people who might come here with sick friends or relatives that were not here then. Our schools are better and our college is better and larger and we have the [illegible] and amusements that make this city worth living in even for a person who is not sick.

"I think the proposition would return 10 to 15 per cent on the investment, probably 15 per cent after the first year. [illegible] our climate. It is the greatest and most valuable resource that we possess and I want to see it developed. I have known of cases at the Antlers and other hotels in Colorado Springs where a member of a wealthy family has had to come here for climatic benefit and the whole family has come. They have sometimes taken as many as six rooms and paid great big prices for them because they were going to be with it and did not want their loved one to feel that he or she was sent away off from home to die or get well as he might and that his friends and relatives were not interested enough to spend the money necessary to be with him. There is now in Colorado Springs no place where proper accommodations for such cases can be afforded and there [illegible] a proper place [illegible] hotel that is wanted. Such people don't want to [illegible] If they have no other place to go and are willing to pay the prices that a hotel will have to demand nothing is to be done but for them to go to the hotel. This sanitarium idea is the proper one. Colorado Springs has everything to interest the people who have occasion to patronize such an institution. We ought to have had it long ago, but we need it more than ever right now. I am in favor of putting the thing through and hope that nothing will stand in the way of the deal that is under way."

What the Good Government Party Has Accomplished to Enforce Law

Has the Good Government party in Colorado City been successful in its efforts to enforce the laws of that place and of the state in regard to the closing of saloons and resorts? This question is a topic of general conversation just at present at Colorado City. There are also many citizens of Colorado Springs and other places of the state who are interested in the movement of reform at that place and they are making inquiries concerning it. The question is discussed [illegible] some being of the opinion that the reform has been a success; while [illegible] new administration have been in vain. There are many who believe that the [illegible] as well as socially [illegible] with the plenty of revenue. The reform movement at Colorado [illegible] been growing in a gradual way for several years. The Good Government party, as the promoters of the cause now call themselves, has steadily gained in numbers and influence ever since the movement was first agitated. Those who first adhered to the principles of the cause have worked earnestly and their efforts have been rewarded by the present strength of their party.

Law and Order.

Four years ago what was called the Law and Order party put up a list of candidates for election to city offices [illegible] success and after several attempts to gain strength the party went practically out of existence as an organization. A year ago, however, those who were determined to see a reform in the matter of enforcing the laws, made another move. They organized the [illegible] Good Government party and those who believed in the doctrine of the party set to work to bring about the conditions that they were after.

The list of candidates put up by the Good Government party last year was headed by Mr. [illegible] There were also three candidates for election as councilmen. The campaign was [illegible] of feeling was aroused. The election [illegible] by a small majority and the [illegible] the new council which was afterwards installed. Mayor [illegible] was [illegible]

The mayor made several attempts at [illegible] on Sunday [illegible] firm in his determinations, but he had [illegible] support [illegible]

Makes Another Effort.

This spring the Good Government party nominated another list of candidates headed by Mayor Goode, and including three candidates for [illegible] were elected [illegible] Immediately after the election of the Good Government ticket, the mayor began his attempts at enforcing the laws. He first issued orders to have the saloons closed at 12 o'clock every night and all day on Sundays. [illegible] trouble on the part of the [illegible] The mayor then waged war against the resorts of the city. He ordered all the houses closed and requested the inmates to leave the city. These orders were carried out to the letter with the aid of Marshal [illegible]

In regarding the change of affairs at Colorado City as a reformation it should not be understood that the town [illegible] The change is simply a matter of policy. The opponents of the Good Government party have [illegible] that from them could be derived large revenues for the town. The Good Government party has declared for the enforcement of laws [illegible] in which the laws are openly violated.

[illegible] that the saloon and the resort [illegible] than it is far better to have them and [illegible] a way that large revenues can be collected [illegible] the city may see and learn of [illegible]

The success of the efforts of the Good Government [illegible] enforced to a greater degree than ever before is quite apparent. This is [illegible] the policy of the party is [illegible] With one [illegible] the saloon [illegible] complied with the mayor's orders with apparent willingness. One saloon keeper has been arrested for violating the law in regard to Sunday closing since the new administration has been in power. In other respects the orders have been enforced without any serious opposition. The marshal is respected as an official under oath to perform his duties and his orders and requests have been met with due respect.

CANCER IS NOT INCURABLE

Time was when Cancer was considered as incurable as leprosy. Physicians and friends could give little relief or encouragement to one afflicted with this terrible disease. Even now doctors know of no remedy for this fearful malady; while admitting it to be a blood disease, they still insist that there is no hope outside of a surgical operation, and advise you to have the Cancer cut out, but at the same time cannot assure you that it will not return. You may cut or draw out the sore, but another will come in its place, for the disease is in the blood, is deep-seated and destructive and beyond the reach of the surgeon's knife or caustic flesh-destroying plasters. The blood must be purified and strengthened, the system relieved of all poisonous, effete matter before the Cancer sore will heal.

S. S. S. is the only medicine that can overcome this powerful and contaminating poison and force it out of the blood. It builds up and invigorates the old and supplies new, rich, life-giving blood. S. S. S. is a purely vegetable remedy, no mineral can be found in it; the roots and herbs from which it is made contain powerful purifying properties that act directly upon the blood system and make a safe and permanent cure of Cancer. It has cured thousands, why not you?

Impure Blood Invites Disease.

Cancer is not always inherited; your family may be free from any taint, yet your blood may become so polluted that a severe and stubborn form of the disease may develop from a sore or ulcer on your tongue or other part of your body, a slight bruise, cut, hurt, a little pimple on the eyelid, lip or nose, a small lump on the jaw or breast, a harmless looking wart or mole, and other causes so insignificant as to attract little or no attention. If you have an obstinate sore, don't rely upon salves or ointments to cure it. Begin with S. S. S. at once. It will cleanse your blood and prevent the formation of poisonous cells.

CHARACTER SKETCH OF JAS. B. BELFORD

By "PHONOLYTE."

Written for the Gazette.

MR. DOOLEY, who is one of the most learned men in political science that the earth has seen since the exit of Petroleum V. Nasby, says that in politics a man must be married in order that he may succeed. Otherwise he may think the game not worth the candle. He does not, however, oppose unqualifiedly. He says that the ability to be a good politician is shown by a man's marrying above his station. But, unfortunately, once in politics, he begins to rise, while his better half remains in statu quo. In the course of fifteen years or so the lady that made him constable prevents his going to Washington.

Some day an interesting book may be written on the influence of women. Thackeray did write something of the kind once, and called it "Men's Wives," but Thackeray didn't believe much in either men or their wives, and there is room for a book on the women who have kept their husbands from being constables in order to make them senators.

The Spartan women sent their husbands forth bearing their shields, with the laconic words—"Return carrying them or carried on them."

In one of the great crises of his life when he was facing a broadcloth mob, Wendell Phillips was handed a note. It said, "Wendell, don't shilly shally," and it was signed by his wife. He didn't shilly shally. Where would he have gone when the mob was through with him if he had?

It is an interesting fact that until the death of Mrs. Burr, Aaron walked as straight and narrow a path as the average young man of his time. Much of his culture and success he owed to her. [illegible] one doubts what [illegible] helpmate Washington had, and as for Abigail Adams—her courage was enough to inspire half a dozen men. Perhaps John Adams knew that he had reason to be thankful that she was not as the rest of men. At any rate, he wrote Mrs. Adams a letter, August 11, 1777, in which he was devoutly thankful that—"the two Howes have not very great women for their wives. A smart wife would have put Howe in possession of Philadelphia long ago." In the same epistle—they always wrote epistles in those days—he says:

"I think I have sometimes observed to you in conversation, that upon examining the biography of illustrious men, you will generally find some female about them, in the relation of mother, or wife, or sister, to whose instigation a great part of their merit is to be ascribed. You will find a curious example of this in the case of Aspasia, the wife of Pericles. She was a woman of the greatest beauty and the first genius. She taught him, it is said, his refined maxims of policy, his lofty imperial eloquence, nay, even composed his speeches on which so great a share of his reputation was founded."

Then there is Mrs. William Jennings Bryan. Mrs. Bryan may not write her husband's speeches, but she could if it was really necessary. When there is a woman like Mrs. Phillips or Mrs. Bryan at home there is no danger of shilly shallying. It is a case when

"To doubt would be disloyalty,
To falter would be sin."

However, this is not a treatise on the advantages of [illegible] for married life is a place where people stay a long time. Still, if any young man can find a woman like [illegible] he should lose no time, for the species is, and has always been, exceedingly rare. In [illegible] Solomon there were none at all, and the price quoted was above rubies, with a rising market.

[illegible] that Belford had a mother who did a good deal for him, and possibly a cousin and a sister or so, and almost certainly a long line of "Hearts Desires," who wore dainty frocks and silk mitts and little pointy-toed slippers, and in each case he could say, with Kipling's soldier, that he "learned about women from her."

He first spoke in public on this stage, September 28, [illegible] at Lewistown, Pa. He was a nice enough baby when [illegible] reached out, and showed his first signs of great [illegible] precocity when he was three months old. His father came in one day and poked him awkwardly in the [illegible] and said in the shame-faced kind of a way in which some men talk to their infants—"Well, young fellow, what can I do for you?"

And Jimmy opened his mouth and said absolutely nothing, which is really remarkably fine language for one so young.

Lewistown is situated in Mifflin county, about sixty miles from Harrisburg, and almost in the exact center of the state. It has between 3000 and 4000 inhabitants now, and probably had half as many in the early Belford days. There is a creek that flows through the town and affords ample opportunities for early education in the matter of [illegible] and all swimming and [illegible] for it [illegible] as natural for the small boy to fabricate marvelous [illegible] of how his hair got wet, as it is for the grown man to narrate the fictions known as "fish" stories.

It was a mistake for Jimmy to be born in Pennsylvania. In the first place, Pennsylvanians are supposed to be abnormally gifted in the matter of holding onto a dollar [illegible] a cent—and one need not be a palmist to know that money will always slip through those open fingers or roll [illegible] generous palm. Secondly, he ought to have hailed from that region where the aborigine learns to say, "I [illegible] to know," with his earliest breath.

Jimmy read all the books the Belford family owned, and borrowed all there were in the adjacent country. He read omnivorously. All books looked alike to him, and he swallowed "Fox's Book of Martyrs," and "Gibbon," and "Bunyan," and "Young's Night Thoughts" and "Pollock's Course of Time," and "Rasselas" and "The Vicar of Wakefield" and "Peter Parley's Universal History of the World," and learned "Shakespeare" by heart. Then he developed the hero-worship habit and learned Greek and Latin and French, that he might know more about Pericles and Themistocles and Alexander and Caesar and the Little Corporal. He didn't have any friendly guide post either. He learned at home, by himself, when he was supposed to be weeding the garden.

Then he went to Dickinson College, [illegible] for two years, and after that he entered the office of David W. Wood, of Lewistown, and began to read law. He absorbed it like a sponge, and when he was admitted he removed his calfskin covered trunk, studded with brass nails, to a place called Montieau, located in Missouri. That was "befo' de wah," and Missouri has an awful climate any how. They showed Belford just how hot it could be there, and he has never liked it since.

It must have been somewhere along here that Mrs. Belford entered the scene of action, because Belford began to be heard from. He went first to Monticello and afterwards, in 1862, to Laporte, Ind. Those were sizzling times

[illegible] the sizzling days his fate to reach boiling point, Belford added fuel until he had the pleasure of seeing the fat in the fire. He was cool and calm as a speaker until he got well into his subject. Once in awhile, when "the boys" tried to have fun with him, he left them wondering whether they had ever heard anything about the habits of buzz-saws.

In 1864 he was one of the presidential electors from Indiana, and had the honor of voting for Lincoln. He had been a Lincoln man in 1860, but the Liberator had conquered him before the next election.

Three years later he was elected representative to the Indiana legislature. No campaign was complete without him. If he had suffered nameless ignominy all the days of his youth when the boys called him "carrots" or "sorrel-top" it was more than made up to him afterwards. Did any one ever see a white colt or a red-headed boy who turned out stupid? Cut out and keep this priceless gem of wisdom.

The red head is the outward and visible sign of an interior and invisible brilliance that shall yet appear.

Perhaps his greatest speech, or at least the next to the greatest, was made at Cooper Institute in the [illegible] campaign. Grant was a magnificent subject for other people to talk about—he said so little himself. At the end of the address A. T. Stewart stepped forward and gave him his personal check for $300. With the election of Grant and Colfax the Belford star was in [illegible] ascendant. [illegible] Bradford of Pueblo, was delegate to congress from this undiscovered country, and China was hardly more remote.

However, Schuyler Colfax was the friend of Belford and there was a vacancy in the Supreme Court of Colorado just about his size. So he came. The scenery in Colorado was rather better in 1870 than it is now. There wasn't so much need for smoke consumers, and the Royal Gorge wasn't a billboard for anybody's sarsaparilla or ready relief. It is easy to enjoy scenery from any comfortable kind of a bench, but the Supreme Court has advantages over the kind of seats furnished at city park.

The most important acquaintance that Belford made in Colorado was that of Jerome B. Chaffee. When you begin to go into ancient history in this state, before you get very far in the archives of the Republican party, you find [illegible] Chaffee's name [illegible] all the [illegible]. The [illegible] pel, according to St. James, was the only genuine, warranted article, and it is said that all Belford's campaigns were made on plans and specifications furnished by Chaffee. There isn't much doubt that Chaffee did his humble best to make Belford walk the chalk line, according to the statute in such case made and provided, but the better one knows Belford, the more certain they will be that he followed his own sweet will, and never did anything he didn't want to do. It is part of the Belford temperament.

In 1876 he was defeated in the race for congress by T. M. Patterson, and in 1878 had his revenge.

In congress he introduced the first bill looking to an appropriation to provide a system of reservoirs for the storage of water to supplement the natural streams, and extend the limit of irrigation. It asked for [illegible] to be expended under the direction of the secretary of war in making topographical surveys for such reservoirs in the valleys of the Platte, Arkansas and Cache la Poudre in Colorado, supporting it by an elaborate speech showing the importance of the measure for the reclamation of countless millions of acres of arid lands in the west. It was immediately denounced by the Atlantic press as visionary, uncalled for and extravagant. The New York Times said he was urging congress to build an extensive series of mill-dams, and at the next session he would go still further and ask an appropriation to build a navy to float on them.

He introduced a bill later authorizing the president to investigate the feasibility of enlarging the commerce of the United States with the South American and Argentine republics by cooperating with those states in building an international railway with a view to more general reciprocity of trade. It was killed. He introduced it at the next session, and having prepared himself with an array of [illegible] data from the records delivered a well digested speech on the subject. The bill passed both houses, and a commission was appointed by Cleveland, which made the requisite examination and report. Out of this action grew the Pan-American congress.

He [illegible] a bill [illegible] appropriations for sinking artesian wells on the plains of Colorado, which passed and was carried through the upper house by Hon. N. P. Hill. Several experimental wells were sunk, but the scheme ended in failure.

He also secured the passage of the bill for a Federal post office building in Denver, since erected, and a number of other measures of value to the state.

Belford was always good at stirring up the animals. He doesn't care much about calm and a little healthy opposition [illegible] brings out his best. It is said Wendell Phillips' friends used to get somebody to hiss when they wanted to see red fire and lightning in the distance. Belford rises to an opportunity magnificently.

Once on a time he rose up in the house and served notice that if the east didn't play fair the west and the [illegible] would boycott it, blacklist its goods and devote themselves to exalting their own horns. And he meant it. One reason why "The Red-Headed Rooster of the Rockies" could always get a hearing in the east is that he means what he says.

This brings one to the worst of Belford's failings, or the truest evidence of his genius—his utter inconsistency.

Take for instance, the silver question. No man was a staunchier advocate of bimetalism than Judge Belford. In [illegible] he made a speech in Denver advocating secession. The editor of the North American Review wired him to send a thousand words, giving his views, at once. That must have been a piece of work to make old men young, and melt the type on the press, for it was sent back with a check for $50 and a letter saying that while it was true, it was too radical to publish.

In the '96 campaign he made a masterly speech at the Auditorium in Chicago. No one who heard it is ever likely to forget it.

"And now," say his critics, "where is he at? With McKinley!" But he must be a very foolish man, indeed, who does not see that inconsistency and sincerity are entirely compatible. If the Judge were a coward he would rather be consistent with his record than true to himself.

Possibly he has thought less, possibly he has thought infinitely more, than others of the issues before the American people today. If he has [illegible] from many of the rest of us, we may condemn the conclusions without in any way reflecting upon him. He is absolutely honest in his convictions, and time may prove that he is right.

He does not believe now, he has never believed, in the "America for Americans" policy. He believes in America for all the world, or against all the world. He said once, in an address to the Grand Army, that the day would come when it would be our mission to avenge the wrongs of all weaker nations. He hasn't ceased to be a bimetallist, but he is an expansionist. This seems to him the main issue in the present campaign.

He has the spirit of the knight errant who was willing to die in the quest of the Holy Grail, while his serfs went without food or shelter and were harried to death by his next neighbor. All the poetry of his nature goes out in the idea of making the flag the herald of a higher civilization the world over. He has no patience with the list of Filipino dead and wounded or the expense account. He is thinking of the day

"Till the war drum throbs no longer,
And the battle flags are furled,
In the Parliament of man,
The Federation of the world."

He has the ideal in his mind's [illegible] rather than the actual. Those of us who perhaps err as far in our way as he does in his [illegible] Richard Whiteing—

"We cannot give better than we have, and we must search our hearts deeply to feel sure that we are equal to the high mission of putting others to death for their own [illegible]."

In either branch of congress the Judge would, as he always does, stand forth a unique figure among his fellows. Colorado would know he was in Washington, and that he had some interest in her affairs between elections, and congress would know [illegible] not a man to be put calmly on one side. You can't get rid of him by making him minister to Dahomey. He is an active, persistent force wherever he may be. Personally he is one of the most entertaining and thoroughly companionable men on earth. He is a learned man, especially in—but no. On second thoughts, there is no "especially." An admirer of his once said—"I think he knows everything. It doesn't make any difference what the subject [illegible] thoroughly posted. I believe he knows how to make tatting and Krupp guns and angel food, and that he could translate Sanscrit if he had half an hour to study it out."

We cannot take the measure of this man now—he is so much greater [illegible]. Moreover, if the prophet is without honor in his own country and generation, it should be remembered that quick returns are not to be looked for in the prediction business. Some of us may [illegible] what we are rather disposed to believe chimeras today.

Aside from the personal merits of the man, the fact that if we had to choose a woman to go to Washington Mrs. Frances Belford would probably be spontaneously "mentioned" in every county in the state, is not his least recom-

The Week in Glenwood

(Special Correspondence)

(Special Correspondence.)

Glenwood Springs, Colo., June 1.

The past week was an unusually quiet one. Possibly the excessive gaiety of the week previous was too much for the Glenwoodites. It is rather early and they are not able to stand quite so much as they will later on. To be sure, the summer resorters continue to pour in. The hotels welcomed back a number of their "annuals," and expect many more the coming week. The more Manager Martin of the Colorado reads about the hot weather in the east, the wider his smile becomes. Of course some people have to live upon the misfortunes of others, and it happens in a summer resort town that the more Old Sol looks upon people with a withering glance in other parts of the country, the more do the residents of the aforesaid town expect to reap. It's hot in the east; it's comparatively cool in certain parts of Colorado; therefore those who have the necessary wherewithal must take part in an exodus. And so in exchange for a little of their filthy lucre, our summer resorts give them "a shady nook, a babbling brook," and many other incidental but greatly appreciated opportunities and pleasures. Such is the status quo in a place like Glenwood. Almost all of the desirable vacant houses in town have been engaged for the summer. The few that are left will be eagerly sought after during the next week or two. The grounds and gardens of the Colorado are blooming in all their glory. To add to the beauty, the Grand is at its height, and rushing along at a rate of 15 miles an hour, dashes over immense boulders and presents the spectacle of a Whirlpool Rapids—and not in miniature, either.

Mrs. Thayer, lessee of the Colorado, who has been in Chicago for the past two weeks, returned to us Saturday morning.

Manager Martin "welcomed" the Elks at the Colorado during the early part of the week. Many of the B. P. O. E. members of Leadville, Cripple Creek and other towns in the state went to Grand Junction to institute a lodge there. On their return they stopped over at the Colorado for a short stay and went away apparently well pleased with their reception.

Otto C. Floto, the sporting editor of the Denver Post, made a short visit to the Colorado this week. Otto tried to referee a fight in Aspen but the effects were such that he thought he would take a short lay-off in Glenwood before he returned to his home town.

Mr. Frank D. [illegible], formerly cashier of the First National bank of this place, and now engaged in the same capacity in the Ouray National bank, returned to Glenwood in company with his wife [illegible] a visit at Mrs. [illegible]'s parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Bixby. He expressed himself as greatly pleased with the improved appearance of the town.

Mr. J. H. Vogel, the well known jeweler of Leadville, has engaged the residence formerly occupied by Dr. McCartney and has moved his family there for the summer. Mr. Vogel himself comes over from Leadville every Saturday and spends the Sabbath at his summer home.

Dr. J. [illegible], the [illegible] who has been away for the past few months, returns home this coming week. Rumor has it that the doctor has been establishing branch dental offices in various towns in the state.

Mr. George W. Granger, a prominent [illegible]. He [illegible] try the effect of the baths upon his system.

Misses Vera and Alice Lee have departed for Leadville on a somewhat extended visit.

Mrs. George A. Weck [illegible] of Riverside, Cal., have come here for the summer. Mrs. Weck says that California is beautiful but Colorado even more so.

Mayor Dolan is being congratulated for the improvements he has brought about in the town since he assumed his [illegible] office. He [illegible] to take action tending toward the improvement of the city park along the river front. Acting on his suggestion, the park was greatly improved. The [illegible] the warmth again. He began a paint [illegible]. Again the people were amenable to advice and [illegible] transformation in that line that Glenwood has ever experienced is now taking place. Almost everybody who owns a house is trying the effect of a coat of paint. Some of our [illegible] this information that has been sweeping over the town. This one thing is certain—the town looks like a different place. There has been an unusual activity in real estate this spring. This [illegible] willingness to improve their properties.

[illegible] is Strawberry day. Everything points to a most successful celebration. By the 16th of June the strawberries will be at their finest, and then the feast will be ready for our guests. A number of changes in the programme have been made this year. The exhibit of wild flowers [illegible] but little interest last year, and so that has been eliminated. A decidedly new feature will be the mask carnival which will hold sway from 7 to 7 p. m. on Grand avenue. This will undoubtedly be the gayest event of the day's sport. Another fact of interest to Glenwood people is that the town band will help furnish music for the day's celebration. As an added musical attraction the Columbian [illegible] band of Grand Junction has been engaged. This will certainly inspire our boys to do their best. The programme as now arranged is as follows: From 9 to 11 a. m. the two bands will give a concert in the park. Then Mayor Dolan will wax eloquent in an address of welcome, at the conclusion of his speech offering the [illegible]. [illegible] the feast rooms will be opened and every one in town is invited to do his worst. There will be strawberries, cream and cake, and enough to make everybody happy. There will be plenty of Jamaica ginger for those who have that uncomfortable feeling which [illegible] makes itself manifest after a free dinner. In the afternoon, all those who haven't had a bath for six months or more will be compelled to take one, at the town's expense. Others will be invited to go to the swimming pool, where they may flounder about to their hearts' content. The swimming pool will be at the disposal of our visitors from 1 to 6 p. m. Suits, rooms, everything will be free. At 2:30 p. m. a baseball game will be played by the Leadville and New Castle teams. At 4:30 a polo game will take place at the Polo grounds. All are invited free of charge. Another band concert will occur between the hours of 5 and 7 along the river side and then the wind-up of the day's pleasures at the opera house at 8 p. m., when the free ball will take place. Of course there will be a big crush, but never mind, for everybody will have a big time. The advice that the committee offers the pleasure seeker on that day is, "If you are in doubt where to go, follow the band." The executive committee is laboring hard to make this the most successful strawberry festival ever held in Glenwood. The Rev. Hiram H. Bullis, chairman of the printing committee, has prepared a highly decorated programme for free distribution. It is covered with strawberries—of course we mean here, pictures of [illegible] and [illegible] that this is the Third Annual Strawberry day. Wm. Lee is chairman of the committee on strawberries, and he declares that all the ranches around Glenwood are to be deprived of their finest [illegible]. Dr. Dean, who has charge of the decorations, will have the town fixed up in gala day attire. The band committee declares that the young ladies and men who are to furnish the music will earn their salary on that day. Of course our journalistic friends in the state will be royally welcomed. [illegible] has charge and he may be depended upon to give the gentlemen of the press a fine time. Last year we gave them a tally-ho ride. This year we will, well, we had better keep quiet what we are going to do with these friends.

An event of great interest to the sharpshooters in this state will take place in Glenwood June 20 and 21. A shooting tournament open to all will be held and it is said that some of the finest shots in the country will be here to compete. One of the trophies to be contested for is the Sallis cup. Altogether there will be 12 events in the tournament, and these will occupy the two days set aside for that sport.

H. J. Holmes, the genial editor of the Daily Avalanche, carries a happy smile with him these days. Without any [illegible] he commenced to talk "band" about three months ago. He urged that this town be represented by a good band but was informed by the business men that the venture could not be made a success. Our journalistic friend thought that it could and so started the scheme on his own hook. There were only a few instruments in town, and so the financial question was a leading one at the very start. However, Mr. Holmes determined to make his scheme a success and so he [illegible] the responsibility [illegible] the instruments needed by the organization. There were a number of men in town who could play if they only would; there were many others who would if they only could. Both of these classes were urged to make up the personnel of the band. There was a gratifying response. Many of the town people laughed up their sleeve, so to speak. But the boys got together and commenced to practice in dead earnest. The knowing ones among the outsiders said that the boys would keep together about a month and would then hand in their resignations. But to their surprise and to the surprise of most of the business men the boys persevered and now have a very creditable organization. Every Thursday evening of late they have given a concert in the new band stand on the river front, and from now on the concerts will be given with greater frequency. This week their new uniforms will arrive and then Glenwood will look with [illegible] upon their new musical organization. Mr. Bert Baglow, the [illegible] Director, believes that [illegible] will be somewhat surprised at the general excellence of the band. There are now [illegible] active members and a number of others in [illegible]. A ball was given [illegible] organization and a nice little sum was realized. For the musical treats of the summer the people must thank Editor Holmes.

[illegible] have a number of acquaintances who are not [illegible]. The two gentlemen in question are A. B. Dotson, editor of the Glenwood Post, and H. E. Sommers, a school teacher. They happened to be the successful candidates for the position of enumerator. Nothing like having a [illegible] when you want a job of this kind.

The G. A. R. men made no extra preparations for a Memorial Day programme. They marched to the cemetery, where in a simple way they decorated the resting place of their former comrades.

Last fall Mr. [illegible] of the Polo club shipped some of his finest horses to California. Reports from that region inform us that the horses have created [illegible] out there.

This town hasn't enough saloons. At least that is what some believe. Mr. Campbell opens up another one this [illegible]. What would this town do without its saloons?

W. H. Parkinson, the druggist, who had been fitting up a new store for his [illegible] new quarters. Both of the brick stores erected by Louis Schwarz this spring are now occupied.

One of the new enterprises started this season is the candy store of Mr. Chase, the proprietor of the Glenwood. However, he is only the silent partner. His better half will manage the concern.

Mr. Henry Kamm of New Castle, who recently purchased the Burtit residence in Glenwood and who now makes his home there, rides horseback to and from New Castle every day. Henry says he is thriving on that 25-mile ride.

W. H. Lee, a respected citizen mourns the loss of his little three-year-old son. A heroic struggle was made to save the child, but all efforts proved unavailing. The bereaved parents have the heartfelt sympathy of their many friends.

The Consul's Cats.

Gen. Sir Herbert Chermside, who is now in South Africa, was formerly a consul in Asia Minor, where he was very popular. Once, in a weak moment, he sent a couple of beautiful Angora cats as a present to a lady in Constantinople. The lady was so pleased that she asked him to send some more. Sir Herbert gave his native servant some money and told him to go and buy two or three. Then came a demand for more cats from the consul's friends, and he gave his servant more money with which to buy cats. This went on for two or three months, and the native servant waxed exceedingly fat. Indeed, one morning, however, the consul, on coming out of the consulate, was surrounded by a host of infuriated veiled women who besought Mahomet to curse him [illegible]. It appears that the native servant had pocketed the money for himself, and gone round with a sack and confiscated every cat in the place.—(Collier's Weekly.

Don't Stick to a Losing Side.

"The choice of a profession," says Sir Henry Irving in the June "Success," "always difficult for a young man, should be governed somewhat by inclination. It was this which governed me—an intense liking, supported by a youthful familiarity with Shakspearean literature and a talent for dramatic work. If I had chosen a profession for which I was unsuited by nature, I might have accomplished nothing in life.

"Every man must choose for himself and the safest plan is to improve the talents one is sure he possesses. If, however, a man is unhappy in his work I take it for granted that person has undertaken work for which he is unfitted by nature, and the sooner he takes up something else, the better it will be for him."

"Rog" Writes of Progress of Western Slope Towns.

On the Western Slope, May, 1900.—My dear Gazette: I have just enjoyed a [illegible] trip in the agricultural districts [illegible] lie between the foot of Pike's Peak [illegible] the western border of Colorado. It has been a pleasing tour, for I find everybody feeling so good and in such a pleasant state of anticipation. Now [illegible] was more fully accentuated than I can imagine, for my business was [illegible] thing in the line of advertising—[illegible] that an advertising man [illegible] usually met with a brass band as [illegible] comes to town. Yes, sir, some of [illegible] people over west are feeling so [illegible] they actually grab the agent [illegible] a smile and ask him to come [illegible].

A Glimpse of Canon.

The first interesting place that I met [illegible] was Canon City, and while it [illegible] a bit warmer than I was accustomed to with my winter flannels on, [illegible] was a pleasure to be there. Everything was green and bad on its [illegible]. The country [illegible] with fakes, snow balls and [illegible] while the procession [illegible] had its parade well strung out, [illegible] is nearly ready for the first clip [illegible] the cereals are standing up high [illegible] Canon City district; you [illegible] has been under cultivation for [illegible] years and is long past the experimental stage. In almost every line [illegible] the fruit orchards are old [illegible], but a majority of course [illegible]. It has only been of late that most of the orchards have [illegible]. [illegible] fruit crop is assured in [illegible] and that means a great [illegible] they generally agree that [illegible] be the largest in the history of this region this not only for the [illegible] more of the orchards are [illegible] but because the conditions are

Do you know, I always liked Canon City. The only blemish is the big prison that is such a conspicuous feature of the landscape. A prison is a necessary evil, like a sewer or a newspaper, and some town must have it. I have no doubt, however, but the pioneers who probably worked and lobbied hard to get the state institution located at their home would be glad to vote it away now. Next to Boulder, I personally like Canon better than any small place in the state. It is filled with pretty homes surrounded by fine trees. The [illegible] are very progressive and do a great deal to promote the interests of the place. This is demonstrated by the fact that they raised by subscription over $30,000 the past year to get the F. and C. C. to build the road there. They are always ready to meet any business proposition half way. Just now they are busying themselves with preparations to [illegible] the [illegible] congress this summer. After the meeting in Colorado Springs the farmers are to be taken to the Grand Canon and then back to Canon City. The citizens are to give them a lunch and then a drive over the cultivated district. It is an excellent opportunity to [illegible] the right kind of people in our state agriculture and the Canon people are alive to the situation. I hope no time will be lost that day in dragging the morbid ones through the prison.

I enjoyed my first trip on a Rocky Mountain railroad, and I "oh-ed" and I "Ah-ed" just as hard as anybody, but I do not like it now. I am always car sick in the mountains and I would rather ride ten miles on the D. and R. G. fine track between the Springs and Denver than half a mile in the Grand Canon. One nice thing, the D. and R. G. has now that is new since I was over the line last is the dining car service. You can get a fine meal a la carte thrown in with your scenery.

A Little Imperialism.

Mesa county is a kingdom and so far as I can make out it belongs to Colorado Springs. My business naturally enough brought me to look for the heads of large enterprises, land, irrigation, sugar, etc., and in nearly every case I was referred back to the owners in Colorado Springs. Do you know that I have found this to be the case in almost every part of the west where I have ever done business. Well, I am glad that Mesa county is largely owned in Colorado Springs for it has a great future. After a fellow has lived in Colorado Springs a long time and goes to one of the smaller places where the conditions are not [illegible] so favorable, [illegible] "Good Lord, I would rather be a [illegible] post in the Springs than the mayor of this place." But that is not fair and any one who goes to Grand Junction and lets his personal feelings get the better of his judgment makes a mistake. Right there is to be the metropolis of the Western slope. The town is in a great valley, as large as some states. There is water enough to irrigate every foot of it and slowly but surely it is being occupied. It is warm there—in fact, with your winter flannels on, as I have remarked, it is torrid—and they can raise almost everything that grows. The people are just now jubilant over the prospect of immense crops, but that is not the thing altogether, though it will give them some ready money. The best thing about Grand Junction is that the conditions are getting right. For years they have raised crops there and have sold them to the mining camps in Denver and elsewhere in a circumscribed area. Here they came in competition with the California crops raised at half the cost and also in competition with the crops of other portions of the irrigated west. There was not local consumption sufficient to take care of half that was raised.

Will Ship to the East.

Now this is what is being done. Through arrangement with associations the crops are to be picked largely before they are ripe and shipped to the eastern markets. It has only been possible to do this on a very small scale heretofore, but people live and learn. The railroads—those very peculiar commercial institutions that make or mar schemes, apparently in a whimsical way—are said to be in happy accord with the [illegible] tion just now. You and I, gentle reader, who live at boarding houses, know what evaporated fruit is. Its the modern machine product of dried fruit. My grandmother was an old-fashioned lady and when I was a little boy, I was always very much interested in the great strings of apples that in the summer [illegible] apples were pared, cut and strung on threads and then left out for the flies to roost on. In the course of time they became dried apples. Now they "evaporate" it by machinery, and a plant is being put in at Grand Junction. The fruit that is too ripe to ship will be thus treated and there will be no loss.

Last year they built a sugar factory at Grand Junction. It is a success and is to be a great factor in the upbuilding of the district. The sugar beet reaches great perfection in that soil, with a large percentage of saccharine. The acreage planted last season was quite large, and this year it will be larger. Everything was experimental last year. The managers, the farmers and the makers were largely green hands and there was some friction. This year they know their business and it will be possible to exact results.

Right now the citizens are looking anxiously for the closing up of a deal that will give them a reduction plant, for they have great mines near at hand, vast quantities of water and coal for the digging. If you had the space and I the time I would go more fully into these and some other matters that would be most convincing. I know that if I was a young fellow looking for a location in a new land where I could engage in agricultural pursuits with hope of a great success, I would give Grand Junction a trial.

It was quite a fete time when I was at Grand Junction, for the Elks instituted a new lodge and excursions came in from neighboring towns. Our town was well represented, and the visitors came away pleased with the new herd. I saw something new at that time and [illegible] women bands but the young girls of that town have organized, have an instructor and new instruments. They make good music too.

A Word for Glenwood.

When a Colorado Springs man gets over the other side of the range he always makes it a point to spend Sunday [illegible] I would go there and spend the whole summer if I had the price. Wouldn't Colorado Springs be the greatest place the world ever saw if you could transport that Grand river and run it along where the Fountain trickles down. And if I could just bring those springs and that Glenwood bath house over here [illegible] Antlers park is I would rather have it as a business venture than the First National, the El Paso and the Exchange banks all in one with their combined deposits. Any one who can't be happy at the Hotel Colorado, has something wrong with him. Its the most exquisitely appointed and the best managed house in the west and I know them all. Its not a reflection on any other house, its a compliment to them to say that they even approach the Colorado. And isn't Charles Martin a "prince?" We Colorado Springs people have seen him grow up in the hotel business and he learned it in the [illegible] in America, the old Antlers, so why should he not be a success with a house like the Colorado to handle? If Barnett gives up his lease on the new Antlers, as I have heard he will do, I hope that General Palmer will ask me to select a manager for it. I won't name him just now, because I don't know that he would take the job, but I have a good one in mind.

It is only a night's ride home from Glenwood, and after all its mighty merits I am glad to get back to the hub, the very center of Colorado—financially, commercially, intellectually and socially. Colorado Springs is "it" in Colorado and you have to knock about a bit to fully realize it.

With apologies to anybody who does not agree with any statements [illegible] above, I remain yours, "Rog."

J. K., or "Tiny," Waterman, who died in South Africa two years ago, was known in St. Louis, his home city, as a young man who never got the "hot end" of any proposition. Some friends once [illegible] Kings Lake, near St. Louis, and the first afternoon they stationed Tiny in a ducking tank, or sink box, where they [illegible] ducks had never been seen. He took the joke good naturedly and that night at dinner he pulled a shell out of his pocket and tossed it on the table with the remark that he "thought he had shot all of his shells away." Most naturally, one of the diners cut the shell open with his pocket knife disclosing the contents. Tiny seemed astounded at the number of "bullets," as he called them, and asked how many [illegible] enlighten him so he said:

"If you fellows who are hunters [illegible] don't know, it seems to me that it is a good betting proposition."

"Good scheme," exclaimed one of his hosts, "let's make it a dollar each, as to who guesses nearest to the actual number in the shell."

"As there is only one bet in this proposition," Tiny suggested, "let's make it $5 a corner," which was agreed to.

Each one wrote on the table-cloth his guess as to the number contained in the shell, and when the pellets were counted it was found that Tiny had guessed the exact number. He accordingly gathered in $30, and when he had it safely bestowed he casually inquired: "What do you fellows think I was doing in that blamed tank all afternoon?"—Argonaut.

THE PROBLEM OF COOL DRESSING

It [illegible] until the first days of summer fall upon us and prostrate us with their fierce heat that we begin to [illegible] the season's wardrobe.

[illegible] our minds take a [illegible] turn from the [illegible] question of how to keep [illegible]. Now it is that the selection of our summer outfit becomes no longer a matter of pleasing ourselves [illegible] of harmonizing effects, but [illegible] serious problem of equipping ourselves for the battle with the [illegible]

What could be more delightful than [illegible] lavish supply of those charming summer gowns [illegible] and [illegible] so expensive are they of summer, so suitable for [illegible] on the [illegible] of an afternoon and evening. The very look of them is refreshing and cooling, but [illegible] we find out that it is not made up altogether of [illegible] noons and evenings. We begin to [illegible] that we shall know noons [illegible] mornings that will be fearful and [illegible] and we remember that by the perversity of all human customs these airy affairs may not be donned [illegible] the hot day has done its worst and [illegible] a few hours of shadowed rest.

The suitable summer dress for mornings and noon, for business and short railroad journeys, for days of shopping and other painful occasions, when we are obliged to brave the sun's scorching [illegible] conventional street dress, is what we are figuring upon now. How to make it look quite compact and spruce and yet be cool and not oppressive.

The unlined skirt is coming conspicuously to the front in this noble cause and gaining a great popularity. Oh, what a joy and deliverance it is to the wasted energies and bedraggled spirits [illegible] of the regulation tailor skirt!

There are a thousand and one occasions in summer when a wash gown is [illegible] and the [illegible] of other material is a boon. The shops are now brimming with unlined skirts which are so cleverly cut as to hang perfectly without the assistance of a lining. These skirts are made of light-weight [illegible] of homespuns and other [illegible] and alpaca. They are also to be had in black and colored taffeta and India and look very trig with a pretty blouse.

The mohair skirts are perhaps the newest and smartest of all and are certainly the most [illegible] and dust shedding. There is the greatest latitude in the making of these separate unlined [illegible] risk of losing prestige as to the fashion. Even the sever close fitting style, from which there has been such a strong revulsion, appears again in the seven-gored bell skirt which is having a considerable sale. The cut skirts, with circular flounces at the bottom, are also extremely favored. There is one important thing that must always be observed, and that is the flare at the bottom of the skirt. It matters very little [illegible]

[illegible] costume was as light as a [illegible] and a model of style and comfort. It was of dark blue chiffon, made upon a wire frame and having numberless gathered [illegible] white Renaissance braids sewed on a [illegible] pompons saucily stuck at one side with a [illegible] of the braid-trimmed [illegible]

The [illegible] ever so many different styles [illegible] indeed. Whole suits of mohair are very popular. The favorite style of skirt is box-pleated and tucked, having the pleats or tucks stitched down within a [illegible] of the bottom of the skirt then released. A light and stylish mohair of steel gray had a deep [illegible] flounce [illegible] with a bias band of the [illegible] rows of stitching [illegible] the same over [illegible] the flounce was attached to the upper skirt. Among the unlined skirts, those of light weight taffeta silk are a blessing for warm weather wear. They are trimmed merely with rows of stitching.

Linen and [illegible] are made in much the same style as those of unlined mohair and wool. Blue denim had quite a vogue also and these denim are useful and durable, though somewhat too heavy for comfort on hot days. Pique skirts and those of white and colored linen are popular trimmed with bands of embroidery between the seams. A new idea in a linen skirt was a yoke of all over pierced embroidery of a very heavy quality, to which the lower skirt was neatly fastened. A bias linen flounce at the bottom was bordered with a very deep edging of the same [illegible] and a narrow band of embroidery insertion of the same pattern joined the bias flounce to the skirt.

And while discussing the matter of skirts it may be remarked that overskirts hold their own in a wonderful way, and seem to have a steady increase in favor. They are quite as [illegible] in various forms. [illegible] skirts draped a trifle at one side and falling short of the foundation by six or eight inches are frequently in evidence. The foundation is usually of taffeta with an accordion pleated ruffle at the bottom and the overskirt is of light veiling, canvas or crepe.

The tendency towards drapery is slowly growing and by fall we may expect to see a decided adoption of this [illegible] newly imported [illegible] crepe de Chine had a skirt composed of three circular flounces over-lapping each other slightly, and bordered by a line of silk embroidery in a paler shade of gray.

But a few words now about the blouse and shirt waists which keep company with these unlined skirts. The elaborately tucked waists are becoming a [illegible] and the fastidious are beginning to avoid them. The favorite notion now is to have your dainty little blouse hand embroidered in sprays and clusters of flowers or any design you may like. French linen batiste is the fabric that is the best ground for this work. Applications of embroidery guipure of a creamy tint upon a like creamy background of batiste are very effective and far easier to accomplish than the hand embroidered designs.

Blouses of flowered muslin, organdie [illegible] and silks are also coming into style and promise to be generally adopted. An unlined blouse of flowered foulard or India silk is extremely cool and very smart when worn with a stylish skirt of some blending hue.

Blouses of pongee, trimmed with embroideries of cream batiste are stylish also and as cool as any wash blouse [illegible] A pretty new pongee blouse which was worn by a woman of rather dark complexion was relieved of its trying tone by bands of black lace insertion. The sleeves were a series of narrow puffs, held close by the [illegible] horizontal bands of black lace insertion. At the elbow the last puff was released and allowed to fall in a deep frill which was edged with narrow black lace. The lower sleeve was made of white mull and yellow [illegible] mohair skirt of pale tan, box-pleated and stitched.

But in turn to costumes for [illegible] summer days I must tell you how exquisite and stylish [illegible] one in particular I saw which greatly held my fancy. [illegible] shimmering blue mohair, made very simply with a plain circular skirt and an Eton jacket, which had the most fascinating square shaped [illegible] antique embroidered in black silk. This was worn with a white mull blouse and was the freshest, daintiest looking costume possible. This pale blue shade is very much the thing this summer, and nothing is so pretty and cool looking.

The great innovation in models for the season's wear is the cut and trimming of sleeves. The [illegible] the plain, close fitting, almost stingy-looking feature of the bodice that we have so long cultivated in our midst. The full sleeve is immensely won[illegible] that is initiated [illegible] it will take long ere the multitude will adopt such a radical change. The double sleeve is shown in almost all of the best models, even shirt waists and blouses are appearing with this half sleeve and un[illegible]

The essentially [illegible] gown, in almost white cloth a pale putty and color in reality, is made with a habit bodice cut short at the waist, becoming [illegible] almost a bolero, showing a belt of finely embroidered silver galon studded with coral at intervals. Fangs of this galon fasten the corsage across a [illegible] de soie, spotted with pale pink. The sleeves are turned back just below the elbow with the silver and coral galon, the lower part being made of the coral spotted mousseline. The skirt is made with a deep flounce en bias, headed with five small tucks. With this coat a smart black cravat is worn with a safety pin in gold set with a coral cabochon and a straw hat in the new French [illegible] shape, trimmed with black taffeta and clusters of deep red roses.

A FICHU WRAP AND PICTURE HAT.

The [illegible] wraps an unimportant part of the summer outfit. There is nothing [illegible] feminine than this artistically designed [illegible] with black lace insertion and edging. Worn with the large picturesque [illegible] white crepe [illegible] black velvet and [illegible] of [illegible] [illegible] could fail to look charming and de[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] sufficiently [illegible] to be in good style. Of course there is even a return to the [illegible] but the seven-gored bell skirt is made without fullness at the top and fits snugly about the hips.

Many of the latest unlined skirts have rows of shirring at the hips and also tiny [illegible] tucks which release the fullness a few inches below the waistline. [illegible] only for a [illegible] however, was of dark blue crepon, the base of it flaring widely, but the gores [illegible] almost straight at the top. This fullness was confined by four lines of shirring upon cords. The bottom of the skirt had one band of black satin ribbon which was [illegible] at its upper edge in white silk upon the crepon. This band added [illegible] trimming and sufficient weight to hold the fullness in place and keep the skirt from flying at the prompting of every breeze. A Yale blue silk petticoat was worn with this skirt and [illegible] a blouse of white [illegible] The blouse had [illegible] sleeves [illegible] at the elbow with a [illegible] cuff and a [illegible] sleeve of white mull and embroidery. The Mothers of Men.

The bravest battle that ever was fought,

[illegible]

On the maps of the world you will find it not;

'Twas fought by the mothers of men.

Nay, not with cannon or battle shot,

With sword or nobler pen;

Nay, not with eloquent words or thought

From mouths of wonderful men!

But deep in a walled-up woman's heart—

Of a woman that would not yield,

But bravely, silently bore her part—

Lo, there is that battlefield!

No marshaling troop, no bivouac song,

No banner to gleam and wave;

But oh! these battles they last so long—

From babyhood to the grave.

Yet [illegible] as a bridge of stars,

She [illegible] walled-up town

Fights on and on in the endless wars,

Then, silent, unseen, goes down.

[illegible] with banners and battle shot,

But [illegible] this little fellow

Doffs his dandy coat of yellow,

And very feebly totters o'er the green;

For he [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] in the sunlight he is seen.

The little winds of morning

Come a-flying through the grass,

And clap their hands around him in their glee;

They shake him without warning,

His wig falls off, alas!

And a little bald-head dandy now is he.

Oh! Poor dandy, once so spandy,

Golden dancer on the lea!

Older growing, white hair flowing,

Poor little bald-head dandy now is he.

Willie's Menu.

The New England small boy generally shows [illegible] he is ever going to have [illegible] I have heard of a certain Boston small boy who got into the habit of teasing his mother for pennies, until at last she said to him: "Now, Willie, I don't like to give you pennies. If you [illegible] earn it." The boy remained thoughtful [illegible] Willie had [illegible] where he got them, but did not question him. But one summer day she noticed that some sort of a hullabaloo was going on in the back yard. Looking out, she saw Willie surrounded by a mob of boys who were yelling with delight. She went down in the yard to see what was going on, and as she passed out she saw, stuck up on the back of the house, this notice, quite neatly "printed" out with a pencil:

Boys' Ideas of Heaven.

[illegible] asked the little boys of a class in a Sunday school what was their idea of heaven. It was curious to note how their replies were influenced by their circumstances in this life. One from the richer quarter of Boston said it was like a big broad avenue, with tall houses each [illegible] A sweet voiced [illegible] boy was of the opinion that people [illegible] a good deal in heaven [illegible] last member of the class, a quiet, thoughtful boy, though one of the smallest in the class, [illegible] school hours, "A place where [illegible] never sorry."—(The Sunday Afternoon.

The Squirrel's Arithmetic.

High on the branch of a walnut tree

A bright-eyed squirrel sat;

What was he thinking so earnestly?

And what was he looking at?

He was doing a problem o'er and o'er,

How many nuts for his winter's store

Could he hide in the hollow tree.

He sat so still in the swaying bough

The Chinese minister at Washington makes many shrewd comparisons between the customs of China and the United States. At the recent graduating exercises of the Woman's Medical College of Pennsylvania, after saying that in his country the art of healing knew no sex, he remarked:

"You observe from this that the men in China recognize that some things can be much better done by women [illegible] necessities of the situation. I wish I could say this much of the men of America, for I am not a little surprised to learn that for all the boast of Anglo-Saxon fairness and chivalry, medical women have had a hard time in fighting their way against strong opposition at every step to public recognition and professional standing. I am sure they would receive better treatment in China [illegible]"

Being pressed a little further on the subject of woman's rights he continued:

"What was it that Mr. Darwin, the great Englishman said? Ah, yes, 'The survival of the fittest.' He said some good things, did that man Darwin. It was pretty clever. Now, I say that it is all right for the women to compete with the men. The strongest will [illegible] If the women are better lawyers, better merchants and better for business life, the men must go down. They will be [illegible] they can do best."

CALIFORNIA FEDERATIONS

California clubs have attracted the attention of the executive officers of the General Federation and the first club [illegible] in this state could have the greatest honor in the gift of the federation if she would but accept it. Mrs [illegible] president of the California Federation has been asked to allow her name to be used as a candidate for national president. The request came by telegraph last week but Mrs Burdett while acknowledging the compliment to the women of the west as well as to herself declined the honor giving as her reasons that she had just assumed state responsibility and that she did not feel sufficient experience to fill the place. Mrs Burdett is a delegate to the general convention.

This is the first time that a state federation [illegible] as an organized body. It is officially stated that of the [illegible] in the federation but [illegible] more clubs and only eight states have a larger membership than California's federation albeit the organization is but infant.

But this state will not have a representation [illegible] because the distance to Milwaukee is great and the railroad has made no concessions to offset this many of the [illegible] delegates [illegible] secured the good offices of those who [illegible] and [illegible] own club alone. She will [illegible] questions of reorganization representation and [illegible] chairman.

SOME SPRAY NOTES

Other women of today, especially those belonging to what is termed good society, seem [illegible] gauntlet of defiance to the grim destroyer Time and to keep up a plucky [illegible] him to the very death. It is really wonderful to see the spirit [illegible] mighty beings display against such mighty [illegible] maintaining to the last a courage [illegible] worthy of a better cause. There is a point at which it is [illegible] in better taste to retire than to keep up a fight which must in the end be ghastly. Still while it is possible it is good to be young and if our modern grandmothers choose to ride bicycles play golf and [illegible] in the summer and rejoice in [illegible] clothes and [illegible] pictures of [illegible] who would [illegible] the French [illegible] saying that a woman never grows old and in [illegible] a couplet may be translated as follows:

Easy to be young in youth
But hard and fine when old in years

[illegible] grandmothers should certainly be encouraged but how about the great grandmothers? Would it not [illegible] for these wonderful new century creatures [illegible] the inevitable [illegible] tent to have gained a generation of their own descendants?

[illegible] is learning to ride the bicycle [illegible] laughingly the other day [illegible] when his auditor [illegible] with incredulity he asserted it was a fact. To be sure [illegible] her title would seem to warrant [illegible] her daughter and granddaughter both having married very young but it certainly sounds incongruous.

The following however is delightful: "I have ordered a tandem," said a [illegible] her mother and myself [illegible] intend making a long [illegible] trip with it in Canada this summer." [illegible] said the gentle face [illegible] rather [illegible] my son thinks it will [illegible] and it certainly will be charming.—New York [illegible]

A prominent woman thus writes:

[illegible] pressing more [illegible] other way [illegible] men than [illegible] various [illegible] half of this [illegible] world reformed. And by [illegible] women too. They [illegible] antagonism or [illegible] the universal [illegible] going in the right direction. The [illegible] women are the [illegible] light [illegible] their light is shining all over the [illegible] how bright it has made [illegible] gentleness and [illegible] ness and all other virtues of womanhood.

And now just one word [illegible] is [illegible] different is the progressive woman of today [illegible] what it was reasonably supposed she would be. [illegible] the twentieth century woman [illegible] and gradually assuming the vices of man as she pursued her heretofore exclusive occupations and interests. This [illegible] applies to the business woman but [illegible] find her. All the modesty and refinement and trust [illegible] supposed she [illegible] business woman and spreads its wholesome influence where [illegible] goes [illegible] women gradually assuming [illegible] men are assuming the virtues [illegible] interests at home.

Everything that depicts the [illegible] and the beautiful may be shown [illegible] with impunity. Pictures of [illegible] fairies and even the funny [illegible] little elves and gnomes and other innocuous creatures of the imagination but horrors of all kinds should be carefully avoided.

A rather funny incident occurred not long ago at the rooms of a well known artist whose taste for curios of all sorts has made his studio a veritable museum. He had accepted an order for the portrait of a beautiful little girl of four and the child had been taken [illegible] At first the little one was merry enough with some toys that had been [illegible] mother had retired to a sofa with a book when suddenly she was startled by loud screams from the child.

"Take it away!" she cried. "[illegible] will eat baby," pointing to a [illegible] and lay on the floor with its skin. "And [illegible] terrible [illegible]" she continued indicating a brass dragon of huge proportions hanging from the ceiling. And [illegible] with increasing crescendo this time having discovered some grinning gargoyles which were great favorites with the artist. Nothing would pacify her [illegible] her to stay among such [illegible] surroundings and she had to [illegible] taken home. Such was the fear and [illegible] with which [illegible] regarded that [illegible] as she called poor Mr [illegible] could not be induced to sit for him [illegible] York Tribune.

Countess Warwick has written [illegible] for being captured by the merely rich [illegible] Prince of Wales has been the main [illegible] this state of affairs [illegible] all the more attention [illegible] South African millionaires the following passages have especial [illegible]:

The former leaders of society are allowed to one side. They cannot compete in the display of mammon. Birth talent and service to the state all have to give way before this new power which [illegible] sensible of no [illegible] and acknowledges but a small [illegible]

She honors the man who has hewed his way sturdily and uprightly to a fortune. She adds:

"But the case is widely different when [illegible] people who [illegible] who have acquired wealth no one knows how, who have come from no one knows where [illegible] sole passports [illegible] is that they have purchased a [illegible] in Mayfair have hired [illegible] prima donna to sing at their parties for a fabulous sum that they provide a supper fit for Lucullus, flowers that have cost a fortune and last but not least that the invitations have been sent out by a needy woman whose motives are—well not exactly philanthropic.

"This is reducing hospitality to a farce and society to a sham. Such a state of affairs would not have been possible [illegible] I had almost written [illegible] years ago. That it is possible to-day goes far to justify the contention that society has suffered a revolution."

These strictures have their amusing side coming from this clever charming but [illegible] the scale of expenditure [illegible] when it is stated that during the [illegible] day royal visit to Warwick castle last year the countess had [illegible] worth of cut flowers every morning from London to decorate the rooms. Everything else was on a similar [illegible]

The other day when the new president of the National Society of New England Women was being installed in office her husband received from the husband of the retiring president a big bunch of violets. The accompanying card was inscribed "Greetings and sympathy."

COLORADO SPRINGS GAZETTE

Published Every Day in the Year

Sixty Cents a Month   Seven Dollars a Year

THE FUTURE OF SOUTH AFRICA

THE proposal for the colonization of the Boers in the United States having [illegible] the direct point of a proposition from a Colorado corporation their answer has been exactly what was predicted by the Gazette some weeks ago.

In other words they prefer to take their chances in South Africa, even under British rule, rather than to take fate's chances in unknown lands.

And that is characteristic of the hard headed sensible people that these Boer farmers are.

In the reply said to have been made by Mr. Fischer, who is one of the Boer envoys to the colonization agent, there is one sentence that is particularly impressive. It is, in substance, that the [illegible] will not and shall not perish in South Africa.

That is the one satisfactory result of this perplexing and many sided war.

There is no occasion for freedom's shrieking whichever side wins in this contest.

The Orange Free State will become a colony and as the residents of the Boer race greatly outnumber those of the British race they will control local legislation just as they [illegible] and the authority of the empire will be invoked and exercised only when it is necessary to maintain the imperial sovereignty or to prevent discriminations against any particular class of citizens.

As for the Transvaal, the rapid development of its material resources and the population that will come therewith will soon put the Boers in the minority, but they will be given [illegible] political rights that are accorded to every other class of citizens.

That British victory in Africa will be followed by a great progress in that country, does not admit of doubt. The Boer system of government, whatever may be said in its favor, is not one to encourage investment or enterprise. The establishment of British authority in the Orange Free State and the Transvaal will give a great impetus to all sorts of undertakings and especially to those connected with railroads and mines. The [illegible] of Cape to Cairo railroad, traversing the Dark continent through its greatest length, [illegible] and its construction has been very considerably hastened by the war in South Africa.

The immediate cause for the outbreak of the war is a point which has already given rise to much discussion. It is likely to remain a matter of controversy and difference of opinion to the end of time. But the remote and underlying cause of the war is not one which admits of such differences. It is the expectation of both parties to the contest that it will determine whether South Africa is to go forward and develop along the lines of a British civilization or those of a Boer civilization.

Fortunately for South Africa and for the cause of human progress throughout the world, both of these civilizations contain the element of liberty.

There will be no reaction in South Africa as there might have been if one of the republics of the world had [illegible]

The Boers will retain nearly all the privileges of freemen, [illegible] may confidently look to time to be their avenger.

For after all a cause such as this cannot be determined by war. The control of South Africa in the future and the direction of its development depends less upon the relative strength of the armies that have been facing each other than it does upon the relative vigor of the two races that will compete or cooperate in the task of making that land what it is to be.

THE VOTE ON THE TRUST BILL.

WHATEVER doubt existed of the insincerity of the [illegible] constitutional amendment in the house of representatives on Friday.

The vote was very closely along party lines. Five Democrats and one Silverite voted with the Republicans for the resolution, two Republicans voted against it, and the Populists without exception were against it.

The Democrats are therefore fairly on record as being opposed to a grant to congress of the authority necessary to control and properly regulate the trusts.

They are very ready to talk against the trusts and to declare that the Democrats would do great things if they had the chance, but when it [illegible] to do the only thing that makes anti trust legislation possible, they are found all voting the other way.

And that is Democratic consistency.

Very possibly the Democrats expect to claim that a constitutional amendment is not necessary and not the best way for reaching the trusts. But upon this point [illegible] other lawyers of recognized authority, both Democratic and Republican, who have declared that no regulation of the trusts can be made effective without a constitutional amendment.

If the Democrats had been sincere, if they really believed the trusts to be as great an evil as they claim, and if they were as anxious to do what is for the country's good as [illegible] have lost no time in endorsing the Republican proposal [illegible] the necessary two-thirds vote in the house.

THE CHINESE INSURRECTION.

THE sending of [illegible] of various nationalities to defend the capital of China from the insurrectionists who seem to have [illegible] their own way in the country is an evidence that affairs in the Flowery Kingdom are not of that peaceful cast which we have been led to believe existed there. A country that can not [illegible] does not deserve to be [illegible] government is an exhibition of Chinese [illegible] which is [illegible] formed of the [illegible]

There need not, however, be any great surprise [illegible] tory of China, notably in the [illegible] which [illegible] thoroughly demonstrated its [illegible] The terrible revelation of official [illegible] made in the war with Japan [illegible] of a rebellion [illegible] is something that ought to be reasonably expected by anyone who was familiar with the facts.

TALKING FOR THE FOOLS.

THERE is a group of congressmen, both in the lower and the upper houses of congress who appear to have a very low idea of the American people and of the sort of arguments that will appeal to them in a national campaign.

Such "statesmen," we are sorry to say, are not confined to the ranks of any one political party and we find them among the Republicans though less numerously than among the Democrats.

There have been very few times in the history of the nation when so many pressing matters required the attention of congress before its adjournment and yet it is the idea of these little men that what the country needs most is to hear them express their opinions of the political misdoings and omissions of their political opponents.

The time of congress that is imperatively needed for the transaction of most important public business is being taken by these persons in political speeches which they suppose to be for the benefit of their own party.

But the American people are not fools by a large majority, even if some of them are. The partisan speech-maker can find no better instance of incompetence and incapacity for public office than he himself affords when he takes hours or even minutes in senate or house at the [illegible] for political speeches.

We have said that the Democrats are worse offenders in this respect than the Republicans, and they undoubtedly are.

The Republicans have a record of which they are reasonably proud.

They also have a consistent policy for the future.

The Democrats have no consistent record for the past and have never expressed any definite plans for the future.

The only thing they seem to be capable of is finding fault with what the Republicans have accomplished and [illegible] anything further that they may wish to do.

A GREATER COLORADO SPRINGS.

THE present agitation for the consolidation of Colorado Springs, Colorado City and Manitou is undoubtedly along the right lines.

They are already practically one city and the maintenance of separate municipal organizations is a source of unnecessary expense, and of other evils without compensating advantage.

[illegible] will be more and more the case.

[illegible] before the police, sewer, water and other important departments will almost make it necessary for these three communities to have a closer political organization than is possible under present circumstances.

For another reason the present is a particularly good time for considering this matter.

Within a year Colorado Springs will undoubtedly become a city of the first class.

If consolidation is to take place at any time it would be a good thing to plan for it in the organization of our new city government.

The reasons for consolidation are such as apply equally to all three cities, and all would share equally in the benefits to come from such a course.

As for the name that is an unimportant detail, but Colorado Springs could afford to be generous.

Let Colorado City furnish the first half of its name for the new name and Manitou Springs the last half for the rest, and we would be contented to adopt the name without a word on the subject.

THE SUMMER-COTTAGE CONTEST.

THE Summer Cottage contest is daily growing in popularity.

It is helping no one so much as the public-spirited and liberal business men who have made the donations which constitute one of the most attractive prizes ever offered.

The door is not by any means closed against other firms giving articles suitable for a house of this kind.

A dozen things can yet be offered to completely furnish the cottage.

The Chinese secret society known as the "Boxers," whose apparent primary object is expulsion of all foreigners, rejoices in the Chinese name I-Ho-Tuan, the "I" meaning righteousness, "Ho" denoting peace, and "Tuan" [illegible] a combination of the idea of [illegible] "righteousness" and "peace through war" carried to the extreme limit.

FRUEHLINGS LIED.

See the man
[illegible]
Note his fine display of brawn!
See him shed his coat and vest,
Longing, too, to shed the rest,
Mark the mower's handle pressed
At his belt
Where a welt,
Groweth with his glowing zest!

Note his brow,
Dripping brow
As the mower doth plow
[illegible]
Leaving here and there a mass
Quite unheeded, and gayly pass
To some branch,
Prostrate branch,

That he did not see, alas!
See him then
[illegible]
Fevered head to wildly mop!
Mark him, as he hurls the bough,
To his neighbor's yard; and now
Note how his machine doth plow
Up the sod,
Yielding sod,
While he curseth roundly, wow!

Mark the stone,
Cursed stone,
And the old, grass-hidden bone!
Hear the clashing loudly ring!
Hear him sulphurous mouthings fling!
See him then in anger wing
To the town,
With a frown,
To hire a man to do the thing!

The Wardenship of the Penitentiary.

(Denver Evening Post.)

The investigation of the penitentiary management makes prominent the one fact that the warden of that institution [illegible] in the discharge of his [illegible] disagreeable duties by outside political interference. To secure a satisfactory condition of affairs there the control should be placed exclusively in the hands of the executive officer. Then he could be held responsible for the satisfactory running of the whole institution. He should be removed entirely from all outside influence, political or otherwise. He should be allowed to make his own selection of subordinates and be held responsible for their acts and conduct. If anything went wrong then the public would know whom to blame for it. As it is today no one in particular shares that divided responsibility but the blame for anything and everything is cast upon the warden. The [illegible] that dabble in the management never come in for criticism.

This is all wrong. In a sense the warden is a judicial officer executing the decrees of the courts. He should be as far removed from politics as the courts themselves, and the management of the penal institutions should be kept entirely free from political interference. But above all things, the responsibility should be concentrated. The board of penitentiary commissioners may attend to the outside business, but [illegible] must have supreme and sole authority. The necessity of this is clearly shown by the recommendations just made by the different boards to the governor. One board lays the blame for [illegible] on the warden, while the other board puts it on the deputy warden. Now who is to be held responsible? No such difference of opinion could exist were the warden clothed with supreme authority, which would make him the sole responsible party. The wardenship must be removed from politics and the holding of that office made solely dependent on the fitness of the man. Not until then can the state expect to obtain a satisfactory management of our penal institutions.

Our Nearest National Duty.

(Philadelphia Press.)

The Boer envoys [illegible] in Washington [illegible] no prospect or possibility of turning this country aside from the strait neutral path in which its policy has been set and kept by President McKinley and in which the American people wish to have the national policy kept. Not even Congressman Sulzer [illegible] as he may, would vote a dollar or [illegible]

But there is danger that the [illegible] national expression of sympathy will weaken the position of the United States [illegible] duty. This is the protection of South America. Italian papers talk about Argentina as a second Italy. German publishers print maps with Rio Grande do Sul, in southern Brazil, [illegible] majority 532 and the Nationalists only 18. There are 45 candidates elected who are on the fence, or as the French more delicately express it, "whose policy is in doubt." The evidence that these elections afford of the overwhelming soundness of the French people outside Paris, the peasants, artisans, shopkeepers and small investors is very gratifying, but [illegible] show the real strength of the government, which has effectually solidified the Republican party. Paris was in a freaky mood when it chose an Anti-Dreyfusard majority to the municipal council, just as it was when it went wild over Boulanger.

The Paris elections have been given more significance by foreign comment than they deserve. The municipal council is a body which practically has little power. None of its proceedings are of binding force and effect until they have been approved by the prefect of the Seine, who is appointed by the government, Paris not being allowed to have a mayor. The only appeal from the prefect's blue pencil is to the government, which usually sustains him. The Paris municipal council has even less power than the Boston common council and scarcely more respectability.

Senator Foraker, who is in Columbus, has made the positive announcement that he will place the name of President McKinley before the Philadelphia convention. The senator has evidently seen a new light since he went to Ohio, as before leaving Washington he told the Inquirer correspondent that he did [illegible] the nominating speech this year. He nominated McKinley at St. Louis in 1896.

He declared a few days ago that while it was customary for the speaker to be selected from the nominee's state, yet the conditions were different this year; that President McKinley belonged to the whole nation, and that the [illegible] nominate him [illegible] be selected from any state.

Senator Foraker's positive announcement, however, settles the matter, and he has probably yielded to the wishes of the president and his Ohio friends.

The make up of the convention is now settled. Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts, will be the temporary presiding officer; Senator Wolcott, of Colorado, will be the permanent chairman; Senator Foraker, of Ohio, will nominate McKinley, and seconding speeches will be made by Senator Spooner, of Wisconsin, and Rev. Dr. Geo. Edward Reed, of Carlisle, Pa., president of Dickinson college, and one of the leading Methodist scholars of the country.—(Philadelphia Inquirer.

On Tuesday of the present week the steamship "Quito" pulled out of the port of New York loaded with 200,000 bushels of corn contributed by [illegible] people all over the country for the Indian sufferers. It is said it will be distributed there by agents familiar with the work of relief in the destitute section of the country. It is not much, in consideration of the awful destitution there, but it is something, and behind it is the good will of the contributors, although the last accounts from that country are that the only thing that should be sent is money; that there is plenty of food there, only the people are too poor to buy it. It is one of the most frightful pages in the world's history, that people to the number of hundreds of thousands should be starving in a land where there is food, their trouble being that they have nothing with which to purchase the food.—Salt Lake [illegible]

Plunger Walton's Nerve.

A story told of "Plunger" Walton in the presidential campaign of 1896 shows that he is a ready man in emergencies. It was in the Hoffman house, with a party of friends from Saratoga, when a Brooklyn lawyer made a noisy argument about free silver. Walton turned and remarked that free silver men were cranks or worse. The Brooklyn man resented this and sharp words followed. Finally Walton said:

"Well, what are you going to do about it?"

"I'm going to punch your head," returned the lawyer excitedly.

"My friend, do you know who I am?" demanded the plunger, according to the New York Press.

[illegible]

"You have heard of John L. Sullivan?"

"Yes, and I've seen him. You are not the man."

"Perhaps you have also heard of Muldoon, who wrestled him and nearly broke his back? You have, eh? Perhaps you have seen him. No? Well, then, you see him now. I am Muldoon, and when you get ready to punch my head, just come along."

The Brooklyn lawyer stammered a little, hesitated, and withdrew in good order.

"If he had known Muldoon by sight," said Walton afterward, "I would have introduced myself as the man who trained Muldoon."—New York Press.

Stonewall Jackson's Cakes.

"I read an article recently about the decline of the buckwheat crop," said a Virginian. "I know one man who will regret to hear it," he continued. Items of Interest to Literary People

Mr. John Morley's masterly study of Cromwell reaches a climax of interest in the June Century, in which he will deal with the death of the King, the commonwealth, and the much mooted topic of Cromwell in Ireland.

Mr. Sidford F. Hamp of Colorado Springs, whose recent book "The Treasure of Mushroom Rock" has met with great success, has added to his laurels as an entertaining writer for young people by a story in the June St. Nicholas, entitled "The Rise of Sharkin."

Simultaneous with the re-announcement of The Century's prizes for college graduates of the present year appears (in its June number) the successful essay in the competition of last year, the poem and story having already been printed. The topic is "The Poetry of William Blake" and the writer is Henry Justin Smith of Chicago university.

Albert Bigelow Paine, author of "The Bread Line," will contribute to the June Century two short stories in wholly different veins—"The Constancy of Elizabeth," a romantic tale of a past generation, with an original motive, and "Pointed Arguments," a humorous negro dialect sketch. In the July number he will further display his versatility in a story of the Kansas boom [illegible]

"The Taming of the Jungle," which made an immediate reputation for its author, Dr. C. W. Doyle, and which ran through three editions in a very short time, was temporarily out of print, owing to the Lippincott fire. The new, fourth, edition is now ready. The same author's intensely strong Chinese story, "The Shadow of Quong Lung," has also been reprinted and the publishers expect a heavy demand for both books.

That no mere man can follow and understand the workings of a woman's mind has become a well known axiom. One of the frankest [illegible] of the motives underlying those fascinations, peculiarities and contradictions which so bewilder men has been given by the young and brilliant Baroness von Hutten in her short novel, "Miss Carmichael's Conscience: a Study in Fluctuations," recently published by the Lippincotts.

It is seldom that the English press becomes enthusiastic over a book, a play, or a picture of American origin; that the reception of John Luther Long's new play at the Duke of York's theater can be characterized as nothing less than extraordinary. The author is now considering the dramatization of his latest novel of Japanese life, "The Fox-Woman," recently issued by the Lippincotts, which possesses dramatic possibilities even greater than those of his present play.

The many readers of that extremely popular book, "Bohemian Paris of To-day," by W. C. Morrow, will be glad to learn that the same author's absorbing story, "A Man, His Mark," which has been unobtainable since the fire at the Lippincott establishment, has now been reprinted and is ready for the market. A noted critic calls attention to the fact that this short novel is an extraordinary example of the power of the element of suspense in literature. Once begun it is impossible to drop the story till the end is reached.

It is not generally known that attached to the staff of the Paris observatory is an American astronomer, Miss Dorothea Klumpke of California. In November last, in company with a [illegible] Mr. Klumpke [illegible] made an ascension from the city of Paris with the purpose of observing the expected shower of Leonids. Her experience of "A Night in a Balloon," on a trip which extended to the border of the sea, will be narrated by her in the June Century, with illustrations by Castaigne, drawn under her directions, and with a portrait of the writer.

One interesting feature of Miss Ellen Thorneycroft Fowler's literary success is her acceptance as the novelist who has pictured Methodism conscientiously and sympathetically. It appears that her grandfather was a Methodist minister, and her interpretation of Methodism to Mayfair has been accepted like her interpretation of Mayfair to Methodism as candid and profoundly interesting. Miss Fowler's new novel, "The Farringdons," is said to be the most successful book among recent fiction.

"The Bennett Twins" will be published June 1 by the Macmillan company. The author, Grace Marguerite Hurd, has for some time been on the staff of the Boston Transcript, of which paper her father is the literary editor. "The Bennett Twins" is a story of student life in New York and many of the characters are likely to be recognized [illegible] who have worked up the studios of the more famous masters of New York though the author disclaims actual autobiography or portraiture.

Of particular and timely interest, now [illegible] for the vice-presidency, will be Gov. [illegible] Roosevelt's article in the June Century on "Latitude and Longitude Among Reformers." It is in the nature of a political confession of faith and sets forth in the frankest manner the writer's opinions of the spoils politician and the obstructive reformer alike, considering particularly the question and limits of compromise in the advancement of political measures and causes.

The Macmillan company have in press a new work by Professor Nash, author of "The Genesis of the Social Conscience," upon "The History of the Higher Criticism of the New Testament." This new volume of Professor Nash's is one of the New Testament Handbook Series, and promises to be of exceptional interest. Professor Nash has given something more than a mere statement of the various schools of criticism, and has produced what [illegible] philosophy of the critical movement from the earliest [illegible] to be written [illegible] general subject in English.

An interesting artistic [illegible] which promises important ethnological results, was undertaken two or three years ago by Hubert Vos, the Dutch portrait painter, now a naturalized American, namely, to paint a [illegible] of types of the world's races. Mr. Vos has already painted twenty or thirty such portraits, and in an article on the subject by Charles deKay in the June Century, four of them will be shown—Hawaiian, Chinese, Japanese and East Indian. In the difficult approach to some of these types Mr. Vos has been assisted by his wife, formerly the Princess Kaikilani, of Hawaii. The completed gallery is intended for a museum.

The conductors of the Century regard the article by Nikola Tesla in the forthcoming June number as one of the most notable contributions ever made to that magazine. The title, "The Problem of Increasing Human Energy," and [illegible] subtitle, "With Special Reference to Harnessing the Sun's Energy," [illegible] indicate the range of its practical [illegible] Mr. Tesla [illegible] working at the larger bearings of the electrical problem, will announce half a dozen discoveries which he has recently made and present in photographic illustration for the first time his [illegible] and striking views of experiments with electrical forces of the greatest voltage and frequency ever produced. One of these shows the production of nitrogen from the air on a large scale, another the lighting of electric lamps without wires, another the disturbance of the earth's charge of electricity (by which great problems are to be worked out), and there are other far-reaching statements of results accomplished. Incidentally to the discussion of the principles involved, Mr. Tesla touched upon [illegible] questions of the copper, aluminum and iron industries, liquid air, power from tides, atmospheric nitrogen as a fertilizer, naval armament, wireless telegraphy and the transmission of power without wires, which he now regards as assured by his recent experiments.

The June number of the Bookman (the summer reading number) has a special cover by H. C. Parker and contains among other articles a valuable paper on the Boer war, by Spencer Wilkinson. Mr. Wilkinson, as is well known, is the military critic of the London Post. Other papers in this issue are: The Yiddish theater in New York, by Hutchins Hapgood; an article by Rev. Newell Dwight Hillis (of Plymouth church, Brooklyn) on the successful new novel, "The Redemption of David Corson"; Prof. Harry Thurston Peck's paper on "Mrs. Dudeney" and Aylmer Maude's article on "Count Tolstoy."

Paderewski sailed for Europe on the 16th of May, after a wonderfully successful season in America. During his travels he has been working upon "The Century Library of Music" which the Century company will soon begin to publish with Mr. Paderewski as editor-in-chief. It will appear in 20 volumes, containing richly illustrated articles upon the great composers of the world written by other composers, and with music which will include the cream of piano-forte literature, including Paderewski's entire repertoire, each piece newly fingered, phrased and pedalmarked, according to the latest and highest standards. The work is being prepared under Mr. Paderewski's personal supervision. The first volume will appear in September.

Dr. S. Weir Mitchell's paper addressed to college girls, in the June Ladies' Home Journal, should have the widest possible reading. It is the view point of a scholar and physician on "When the College is Hurtful to a Girl." The social, domestic and business life of Hetty Green is strongly pictured in "The Richest Woman in America," and "The Passion Play This Year" tells of the performances and of the players who take the chief roles in the great religious drama given every 10 years at Oberammergau. Ian Maclaren writes on "The Minister and His Vacation," and Mrs. Burton Kingsland on "Correct Letter-Writing." Rudyard Kipling's "Just-So" story, [illegible] how the kangaroo came by his long hind legs, is extremely funny. Julia Magruder's capital new serial is begun in the June Journal. She calls it "The Voice in the Choir." There are several notable pictorial features, a page drawing, "The Auction at the Farm," by A. B. Frost; a group of photographs showing "Sol Smith Russell in His Summer Home"; the third installment of "Through Picturesque America"; an apron worked by Mary Queen of Scots while awaiting execution, and "Cottage Chambers." The correct thing in women's wear, articles on cooking and other themes pertaining to the home are included in the practical features of the June Journal.—By the Curtis Publishing company, Philadelphia.

D. Appleton & Co.'s announcements for May and early June include two books of special interest to nature lovers. One is "Bird Studies With a Camera," written and beautifully illustrated by Frank M. Chapman, author of "Bird-Life" and the standard "Handbook of Birds of Eastern North America"; the other is "Familiar Fish," by Eugene McCarthy, a practical book upon the habits and capture of freshwater game fish, with an introduction by Dr. David Starr Jordan and many illustrations. The announcements of the Messrs. Appleton are particularly strong in promising novels. They will follow Miss Fowler's "Farringdons" and Mr. Thomas' "Last Lady of Mulberry" with "In Circling Camps," a romance of the American civil war, by J. A. Altsheler; "Pine Knot," a story of Kentucky life, by William E. Barton, author of "A Hero in Homespun"; and a new novel entitled "The Girl at the Halfway House," by E. Hough, author of "The Story of the Cowboy," which is described as a genuine epic of the west. Appletons' successful Town and Country Library will offer "The Seafarers," a romance by J. Bloundelle-Burton; "The Minister's Guest," a novel by a new English writer, Isabel Smith; [illegible] by Mary E. Stickney; "Path and Goal," a novel by Ada Cambridge, and "The Flower of the Flock," a novel by W. E. Norris.

In his book, "The Biblical Theology of the New Testament," which is shortly to be published by the Macmillan company in the New Testament Handbook Series, Professor [illegible] Gould has the following discussion, which will be of interest to the general theological public: "Why is faith the principle of righteousness? The answer to this is obvious to any one who is conversant with the apostle's thought. At least, the most obvious answer is that faith justifies because it connects the man with Christ, and our Lord is himself the vital principle of the new life, and faith is what brings the source and the recipient of the life together, as roots bring the plant and the soil together. Anything in either God or Christ which is restoring and life-giving in its effect may become the object of faith, and the restorer of life, but, as a general thing, just as it is Christ who is the usual object of faith, so it is the death of Christ rather than the other aspects of his life; and so we have here the first attempt to rationalize the death of our Lord." This last sentence is illustrative of a very important element in Professor Gould's treatment, namely, the tracing of the gradual rise of theology through the New Testament [illegible]. In his [illegible] Professor Gould traverses [illegible] beliefs in a way that is likely to arouse some discussion.

Many people labor under the delusion that destiny is against them, writes Orison Swett Marden in the June "Success," that some cruel fate has decreed them failure or unhappiness. They believe they are handicapped in the race; that they are not as other people; that they were born under an unlucky star, and that [illegible] effort of theirs, do what others can do. They do not dream of attributing their failure to achieve results to lack of ability or steadiness of purpose, but firmly believe that some mocking fate is bent upon making them miserable.

If we can only get a glimpse of the reality of life, the principle of our real being, we shall find that every defect in our lives not only comes from a cause, but also, as a rule, from some cause within ourselves. If we put gold into the mint, we naturally expect to get coined gold in return. If we put [illegible] into the loom, we expect to get [illegible].

My first book was written while I was a student at London university and when I was about 17 years of age. A fellow student suggested that I should write a Jewish story, the proceeds from the sale of which would enable a proposed comic paper [illegible]. If he had suggested an epic I should have written it. So I wrote the story in four evenings (I always write in spurts), and within ten days from the inception of the idea the booklet was on sale in coverless pamphlet form. The printing cost ten pounds. I paid five, and the friend who had suggested the book paid five, and we divided the profits.

This first book (price one penny, net), went well. It was loudly denounced by those it described, and widely bought by them. It was hawked about the streets. One little shop in Whitechapel sold 400 copies. It was even on Smith's bookstalls.

There was curiosity among Jews to know the name of the writer. Owing to my anonymity, I was enabled to see those enjoying its perusal who were afterwards to explain to me their horror and disgust at its illiteracy and vulgarity.

I do not possess a copy of my first book, but somehow or other, I discovered the manuscript when writing "Children of the Ghetto." The description of [illegible] Jewry was transferred bodily from the manuscript of the first book.

Leslie's Weekly.

Many persons imagine that it takes a small fortune to pay for a trip to Europe, and few will believe that the modest sum of $250 will give one a first-class ticket to Paris and a balance sufficient to pay for a two weeks' stay there and a week in London. But that this can be done is shown very clearly by a most sensible, practical, full page illustrated article in Leslie's Weekly from the pen of its special correspondent in Paris, Miss Mary Peckham Sleicher. Other illustrated features of the Decoration Day number of this popular publication include the drawing on the cover by E. N. Blue, representing Uncle Sam honoring the heroes of the various American wars; a Decoration Day idyl, entitled "Reunited," from the pencil of B. West Clinedinst; the home of General Horace Porter, the American ambassador at Paris, where many American visitors to the exposition will be entertained this summer; the recent fatal accident at the exposition, and a number of interesting photographs of the grounds and buildings; and "The First Tap of the Speaker's Gavel," an incident which always attracts the attention of visitors to the sessions of congress. This is a double-page drawing by T. Dart Walker, who has contributed a number of very excellent Washington sketches to Leslie's Weekly this year. "The National People's convention at Sioux Falls, and comprehensive pictures of Norfolk, Portsmouth and Old Point Comfort, Va., are also attractive features. The letterpress includes an editorial contribution on "What Should the South Do?" by the Hon. John S. Wise, now of New York, but formerly of Virginia. "Jaspers" "Hints to Money-makers" and all the customary departments, including an unusually newsy page of people talked about.

The June Century.

One of the most notable articles the Century has ever printed is "The Problem of Increasing Human Energy," contributed to the June number by Nikola Tesla, the electric investigator. Mr. Tesla regards mankind as a mass in motion, and addresses himself to the problem of increasing its force. This can be done in three ways: by increasing its mass, reducing its friction, and adding to its velocity. Its mass is chiefly reduced by lack of food, and to increase the food supply he would utilize as fertilizers [illegible] compounds extracted from the atmosphere by the chemical action of electric discharges. The chief friction-element diminishing velocity [illegible] would lessen the destructiveness of [illegible] things that would fight without involving the exposure of those who launched them against the enemy, thus taking the personal animus out of war. The transmission of intelligence and of power to distant distances by electricity operating without intervening wires would give humanity an enormous forward lift. To each of these ways of increasing human energy Mr. Tesla announces one or more contributions, presenting for the first time photographic views of recent experiments with electrical forces of enormous voltage. His paper combines philosophical theorizing with the record, now for the first time made, of experimentation in many directions.

In the department of pure literature the current Century is notable as containing hitherto unpublished poems by James Russell Lowell, and new poems by Edmund Clarence Stedman and Thomas Bailey Aldrich. Governor Roosevelt writes with deep conviction of reform and reformers, putting in a plea for compromise or "agreement," and warning practical reformers that they must not only fight the bad opposed to them, but ignore the Quixotic good. Related to this article is one on the need of reform in the consular service, by Harry A. Garfield. The origin of [illegible] of 1860 is described by one who heard the story from ex-Governor Oglesby, its originator. Miss Dorothea Klumpke, the American astronomer, tells of her night ride in a balloon, last November, from Paris to the coast, in unsuccessful quest of leonids; Richard Whiteing writes, with Gallic lightness, of life on the boulevards in his series on the Paris of today, and Charles de Kay chats of Hubert Vos' portraits of typical natives of China, India, Hawaii, Java, etc. Four of these portraits are reproduced. The number abounds in fiction, including Dr. Mitchell's "Dr. North and His Friends," and five short stories, two in different keys by Albert Bigelow Paine, and the other three having political bearings: "Conlon," by Arthur Colton, showing the relationship of a "heeler" with his "boss"; "The Mouse," a story of the Washington diplomatic corps, by Lucy Nowell Clark, a new writer, and a satire by Stewart Chaplin entitled "The Stained-Glass Political Platform." Chief among the illustrations are reproductions of an unpublished portrait of Alexander Hamilton, by Sharpless, accompanying a letter containing a characterization of his slayer, Aaron Burr; an unpublished photograph of Lincoln and the frontispiece engraving by T. Cole from Turner's "Ulysses Deriding Polyphemus."

Thomas B. Reed's Ideas of Life.

"You are well experienced in the world's affairs," I ventured. "What do you take to be the object of life? Money?"

"No."

"Individual happiness?"

"Not wholly. Right action. A man should take a part in the affairs of his fellow men and live up to the dictates of his conscience in acting. He should be of some use. If he has desires, all the better. A desire for anything that will help others and satisfy you is a good thing. A man has a right to desire money or place or public praise, but he has no right to any selfish feeling in the matter. He ought to desire to be liberal and earn his reward by service of some kind."

"Do you think the world offers as much to individuals as it ever did?"

"If we can trust history, it does. The literature of earlier times seems more complaining than our own. Men were just as dissatisfied a thousand years ago as they are now. Man seems always to have craved a great deal more than he could obtain. Individually, I think, the age is richer with opportunities than for ages. The system under which we live is somewhat defective, and many suffer by it; but it is changing and the world grows better. The unselfish man will find enough, I fancy, if he honestly fulfills his duty to his fellow men. It is all a question of peace of mind, and that can be obtained in various ways—the best one, by doing right."

NICARAGUAN MINISTER SAYS HIS COUNTRY IS PEACEABLY DISPOSED.

This is a new portrait of Luis F. Corea, Nicaragua Minister here, who denies that his country has any hostile intentions toward Costa Rica. The frequency of rumors to that effect in news dispatches led him to make the declaration.

Fort Collins and Larimer County

(Fort Collins Courier.)

Fort Collins has not up to this time been a mining camp. It has no round houses, machine shops and manufacturing establishments, but it is, nevertheless, one of the most thrifty and steadily growing towns in Colorado, and is destined to become one of the most solid business centers in this region of country.

Its material strength is derived from the agricultural and stock interests of the country surrounding it. These two resources constitute its financial pillars, which are stronger and more enduring than mines of gold and silver, or any artificial props which are the handiwork of men. The city is the seat of the State Agricultural college with its [illegible] students. There are three public schools, one of which is a high school, a free kindergarten, three weekly newspapers, eight church organizations, two banks with $700,000 deposits, one electric light plant, a water works owned and operated by the city, two flouring mills, one opera house, and two or three public halls, one creamery and cheese factory, a public library, five hotels, together with all the paraphernalia and necessary adjuncts, possessed by any western city of nearly 4000 inhabitants.

The city has a payroll, as may be seen from the following figures: There are 120 business houses which employ about 300 clerks, assistants and helpers, with annual salaries aggregating about $162,000.

This gives the reader a fair idea of the internal resources of Fort Collins, and the sources whence they are derived. The financial condition of the city is good when compared to that of many others in the state. There is a bonded indebtedness of $105,000, bearing interest at 5½ per cent, and a floating debt of outstanding warrants of $2,000. The bonded debt will be due in 1901 but to be paid at the option of the city in 19[illegible]. The total assessed valuation of property for Fort Collins is, in round numbers, $879,000, and a tax levy of 13 mills. The city owns and operates its water works, from which it [illegible] revenue of about $11,[illegible].

There are 22 teachers in the public schools, and about 1100 school children. The schools are well attended, well equipped and are first-class in every sense of the word. The teachers receive a good salary and have been selected for their positions with special reference to their fitness. Fort Collins is noted for the number and flourishing condition of its secret and fraternal organizations, and its social and literary clubs, which number 24. The churches are liberally sustained with an attendance as large as that of any city of its population in the country.

We have interviewed a number of the business men, and they tell us, without a single exception, that business is good and that finances were never in a more satisfactory condition. There have been fewer failures, considering the number of business houses, than have occurred in any other western city of its size since the panic of 1893. The bankers say their deposits are increasing in amount right along, and that interest on both large and small sums has been scaled down lower than it has been for years. In fact, money can be borrowed from the Fort Collins banks at a less rate of interest than it can be borrowed from the banks of Denver. Rents are reasonable although houses are scarce. All the desirable business and residence properties are occupied, and a number of additional cottages containing from four to eight rooms could be let at once at a good rental.

Fort Collins has no saloons and has had none for about five years. The moral as well as pecuniary results have been highly gratifying. The merchants claim that business is not only better than it was when the saloons were here, but that there are fewer bad debts and collections are more easily made. There is less crime. The jail is empty about half the time; when the saloons were in operation, the "lock-up" always had its occupants, and the cost of criminal cases overbalanced the amount of revenue derived from saloons. The fact that saloons are things of the past has increased the number of students at the Agricultural college, and has also increased the population of the city by bringing to it men of means with their families who have built their homes here because Fort Collins is a temperance town.

Next in size and importance among the towns of the county is the beautiful and thrifty little city of Loveland, which contains about 1500 inhabitants. The people are intelligent and refined, and the surrounding country is settled by an industrious class of citizens. The town is the center of one of the richest and most productive regions of Colorado. It is the outfitting point for far-famed Estes park, and in addition to a large agricultural trade it commands an extensive patronage from different mountain points. Its schools, churches, business houses and banks are prosperous. It has a large flouring mill, a creamery, water works and electric light plant, two ably edited and enterprising weekly newspapers, and a well equipped fire department. The tax levy is only 7 mills. There is no town in the state, of its size, that has a brighter future and none more attractive to the eye of the stranger.

Berthoud, the third largest, has a population of about 5[illegible] people, and is located in one of the richest farming sections of the county. Walden, Bellvue, Laporte, Livermore and Bettis are other towns. Laporte is noted for its great abundance of onions and vegetables. Larimer county can boast of Estes Park, one of the most widely known and picturesque pleasure resorts in the state.

Larimer county, of which Fort Collins is the county seat, is the fourth in size in the state, and contains about [illegible] inhabitants, who are a thrifty and intelligent people.

Farming, of course, is done by irrigation, and the county has a system of reservoirs and ditches that is not surpassed by that of any county in the state. There are 5,000 acres of reservoirs and about 1,400 miles of canals and laterals.

There is but one county in the state that raises more cattle, the number here being about 51,000. No other county that feeds and ships so many lambs.

There was raised in 1899:

			Value
Wheat	bushels	570,000	$459,000
Oats	bushels	400,000	100,000
Corn	bushels	60,000	24,000
Barley	bushels	100,000	65,000
Potatoes	cars	137	40,000
Onions	cars	75	13,500
Cabbages	cars	30	[illegible]
Dairy products			125,000
Hay	tons	150,000	600,000
Cattle	sold	16,000	500,000
Lambs	sold	215,000	1,290,000
Aggregating			$3,224,000

In addition, there were 52,000 acres of alfalfa. The three items of potatoes, onions and cabbages, are only the portion of the crop that was shipped from Fort Collins. We [illegible] there is another county in the state that can duplicate these figures for any single year.

The feeding of lambs is the greatest and most rapidly growing industry of the county, and the most conservative estimates place the number this year at 240,000, from which a profit will be made, if present prices continue, of more than $400,000.

The total assessed valuation of property for the entire county is $[illegible]. The debt is small, consisting of $40,000 in bonds, bearing 6 per cent. This will be refunded at a less rate of interest.

There are 61 school houses in the county; 95 teachers, including those in the towns, and 3,6[illegible] school children; 121,000 acres of agricultural land, 486,000 acres of grazing land, 58 miles of railroad and 35 miles of telephone and telegraph wire.

The fruit interest is growing to be more valuable each year. The acreage is being increased, especially in the smaller fruits, and but a few years will elapse before the county will make a record in fruit raising that will compare favorably with that of some of the best known fruit sections of the state.

Everything can be grown in Larimer county that can be produced elsewhere, [illegible] for the soil is exhaustless in its fecundity, and the climatic conditions are all that is favorable.

A promising copper mine is now being worked at the new town of Bettis, seven miles west of Fort Collins. Twenty-four men are employed. Nine cars of ore, which runs about 10 per cent, have been shipped and tested, and the shipments are expected to average about two cars a day. Gold mines have been discovered in different parts of the county, but owing to their remoteness from railroads, and the want of means with which to develop them, they have not been worked. Some placer properties, however, are being developed in North Park.

The rock quarries of the county are recognized as being among the most valuable in the state. From one of these is taken the beautiful granite of which the United States mint at Denver is being constructed. About 100 cars of stone are shipped each week, the price of which will reach, during the year, $144,000. This industry gives employment to 250 men.

Fort Collins is situated in the valley of the Cache la Poudre river, on the C. & S. railroad, [illegible] miles north of Denver, at an altitude of about 5,000 feet. By reason of its location, the town is as healthy as any in the state. There is also an immunity from storms, which but few if any other places enjoy, and the cause of this is the absence of any lofty mountain peaks in the immediate vicinity.

The streets are from 100 to 140 feet in width, and away from the business center are lined with shade trees, characteristic of so many of the Colorado towns. It is hard to imagine a more beautiful location for a city. The many handsome residences and comfortable cottages, with their environments, bespeak the refinement and contentment of the people. In fact, everything about the town gives one the impression that Fort Collins is an ideal place in which to live. The people are genial, hospitable and cultured, and looking as they do upon the bright side of things, they enjoy life.

Some Famous "Peck's Bad Boys."

Andrew J. Preese, who taught John D. Rockefeller, Marcus A. Hanna, and other youths, has this to say of his "boys" in the June "Success":

"John Rockefeller was one of the best boys I had. He was always polite, but when the other boys threw hickory nuts at him or attempted any undue familiarities with him he would stop smiling and sail into them. Young Hanna—Marcus A. Hanna—who was also a pupil, but not nearly so good a boy, learned this to his cost more than once, and so did young Jones, the present Nevada senator. I have had several [illegible] and, one of my girls is now Mrs. John D. Rockefeller. I had Edward Wolcott, the Colorado senator, later on, but he was a poor scholar—always truant, pitching pennies all the time. Yes, John was about as intelligent and well behaved a chap as I ever taught."

A Curiosity of Literature.

It is one of the curiosities of literature, says George F. Parker in the April Atlantic that, although the consular service has not produced reports of either economic or informing value, many writers have done conspicuous work, before and during service and after retirement. W. D. Howells wrote some delightful books on Italy. Besides his "Life of Peter the Great," Eugene Schuyler wrote an acceptable short history of American diplomacy and translated some of Tourgenier's novels. Hawthorne, Elihu Burritt, Underwood, Bret Harte, Benfield, Richman—to mention only a few—have done notable work in literature, but not an official report of value. In the one case there was something to say, united with freedom of view and opinion; in the other there was nothing to say, and red tape was too strong for them. The fault is in the system, not in the men.

IMPERIALISM

By JOHN P. COCHRAN.

Much has lately been said about imperialism. I propose to give the readers of the Gazette a dose of it, pure and simple.

And the amendment to the federal constitution now pending in congress, [illegible] has been amended from time to time, so as to appear like an old patched quilt. When we remember the condition of America a hundred years ago, we wonder at the wisdom and intelligence that could produce such a sublime and noble instrument to guard and protect human rights. [illegible] a great and good work, much to elevate and bless the human race. It was well enough adapted to the wants and necessities of the people a hundred years ago, but time and circumstances have silently and imperceptibly diverted many of its provisions into very unlooked for results, that are very unjust and inequitable. It was a compromise in many of its provisions. There was much jealousy between the thirteen colonies lately freed from the British crown.

Each claimed without regard to its territorial extent or population to be the equal and peer of any other—as a distinct sovereignty. So when in the convention, the question of senators was under consideration—how many there should be, and how chosen, the smaller colonies claimed that in right of their sovereignty, they should have the same vote and power in the senate the greater colonies had. As the smaller colonies vowed if this right was not conceded them, they would never sign the constitution, the convention, to save the proposed union, as a compromise, yielded to their demands.

It was forced to do that or have no United States.

This senatorial provision a hundred years ago, was not so unjust and inequitable as it is now. Let us see how it works now.

In 1896 there were cast 1,429,876 votes in the state of New York for president. In the state of Nevada there were only 10,315 cast.

Yet Nevada has the same vote and influence in legislation New York has, because she has the same number of senators. In a word one man in Nevada has as much power and influence in national legislation as 13[illegible] men in New York.

But the evil does not cease here. In the electoral college for president each state is entitled to a vote for each senator. Thus Nevada cast three electoral votes or one for every 3,438 popular votes. New York has thirty-six electoral votes, or one for every 39,718 popular votes. Thus it is manifest, a man in Nevada has as much influence in choosing a president as 11[illegible] men in New York. This may seem to be an extreme case, but it is not. Pennsylvania cast at the same election 1,194,35[illegible] votes; Delaware 5[illegible],160 votes. Pennsylvania had thirty-two electoral votes, or one for every 37,[illegible] popular votes cast. Delaware had three electoral votes, or one for every 8,386 votes cast. In a word a man living in Delaware has the same power and influence in choosing a president that forty-eight of his neighbors do, who live in sight of him, but just beyond the dividing line that separates their respective states. Can any man of any party say this unequal representation is just, right or in accord with the great American idea that all men are free and equal before the law?

There was another compromise admitted into this instrument as necessary to its adoption. When the question of what should constitute the basis of representation in the house, [illegible] claimed that its slaves should be counted as citizens and be entitled to representation. The north justly replied—you do not permit them [illegible] and treat them as chattels without a human right. You have as much right to have your horses and mules counted in the basis of representation as your slaves. There was no logical answer to this reply.

But to save the adoption of the constitution, and a more perfect union, the north generously agreed to the compromise that three-fifths of the slaves should be enumerated for such purpose. The direct effect of this compromise was to give every man in the south who owned five slaves, just four times the power any man in the north possessed in the legislation of congress and the election of a president. [illegible] owned a hundred slaves sixty-one votes, whilst the northern man had to be content with one. But the southern white man is now doing better even than that. Now all the negroes are counted, but few of them are permitted to vote. There is not a member of the present house from the state of Mississippi who received as many as 5,000 votes. As the negroes were not permitted to vote, it was not necessary for many of the whites to trouble themselves to do so. In contrast [with] the Mississippi plan of electing congressmen, Mr. Bell, the representative from this district, received 80,000 votes, one of the members from Mississippi represents a district in which there is a majority of 25,000 Republican negroes and yet he received only 2,000 votes.

Another compromise in the constitution was the clause legalizing and protecting the African slave trade until 1808.

Strange as it may appear, the slave holding south plead for the abolition of this inhuman traffic, whilst puritanical New England insisted it should continue. New England owned the ships that bore the wretched creatures from their homes in Africa to the cotton fields of the south and had a monopoly of the infamous traffic. She could buy a negro on the African coast for five gallons of rum and sell him to a planter in Georgia for five hundred dollars in gold. Her profits from this inhuman traffic were enormous. If half the wretched negroes died on the voyage [illegible] the profits on the remaining half were simply enormous. It was this compromise that gave the turbulent Senator Wigfall from Texas in 1859 the opportunity to hurl into the face of the New England senators his famous philippic, as with clenched fist and fierce indignation he exclaimed: "Your ancestors stole negroes from the coast of Africa for the love of gold. You now steal them from us for the love of God. You are always stealing negroes from some one under some pretext." New England can stand under the force of this indictment, because she knew she was guilty.

From the first of these two compromises arose the fatal heresy of state rights—a dogma that has brought great sorrow and trouble on our country and which I trust was buried, without hope of resurrection, in the grave of Appomattox—a grave dug with bayonets and saturated with fraternal blood.

Having thus stated the evils under which we have fallen, I propose to offer a remedy for them—a remedy so pure and so simple, so just and beneficent, no man can successfully resist.

We are governed too much. There is too much legislation. Let us abolish the state governments and free the people from the horde of officeholders, pap suckers and tax consumers who rule them without sense or wisdom, and plunder them without mercy.

As a remedy for the evils under which we live, I propose that a convention of all the states be called to adopt a constitution suitable to the exigencies and necessities of the present day—which are very different from those of a hundred years ago. The universal approval of the proposition to elect United States senators by the people, instead of by the legislature, indicates how much the people desire a change from the present constitution.

Let us have a new constitution, fresh and vigorous, representing the advanced thought and civilization of the twentieth century—one utterly freed from the unjust compromises and hoary legends of the present one—one in which the detested word slavery shall not appear.

I deny the right of one generation to dictate the constitution and laws under which the succeeding one shall live.

I suggest some of the provisions the new constitution should contain.

Let its first article provide that all the state governments be abolished, as unnecessary, retaining on the map only their territorial lines for postal facilities. They cost the taxpayers of the United States more than a hundred million of dollars a year. The United States could give the people a better system of laws for twenty-five million of dollars a year and thus save the taxpayers seventy-five million dollars a year, now extorted from the horny hand of toil, to be wasted on a set of politicians, office holders and boodlers.

Take the state of Colorado, for example. It costs more than a million dollars a year to defray its expenses. The United States could give us a system of laws far better than we have and administer them for half the money, thus saving our over-burdened people a half million of dollars a year in taxes.

We are too much governed. I mean by we, the people of the United States. There are forty four states, each has a governor, a legislature and judicial system, and innumerable other officers. These legislatures, to a great extent composed of fools or idiots, or rascals, are always passing laws that are utterly unnecessary, if not vicious. An imbecile and truculent governor signs them. The next legislature at equal expense, repeals them and passes others equally useless, if not more obnoxious. And the poor taxpayer has to pay the bills, if his children [illegible] and his wife [illegible] without a cheap gown. Oh, what a shame!

The code and statutes of Colorado cover [illegible] than 7000 pages. I could write a better code and all necessary laws on 600 pages. We are governed too much. Let the state governments be abolished. Stop this flood of incongruous and contradictory legislation rendered by the different states—that the taxpayer has to pay for. Let us have one and the same law of descent and distribution, of divorce, of interest, of exemption, of testimony, indeed on all matters that shall prevail from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

Let the new constitution provide that United States senators shall be chosen by the people from districts defined for the present by the convention and subsequently by congress, without any regard to present state lines, which shall be composed of contiguous territory and the same population as may be possible. Let the same rule apply to the selection of United States judges. Congress can easily divide the whole country into proper districts for the purpose of choosing all the above named officials. Also let the new constitution provide that no one of foreign birth shall have the right to vote until he has resided here twenty-one years; our children have to wait that long before they can vote.

Also let the right of suffrage be extended only to those who can secure a certificate of qualification, on grounds prescribed by law, from a board of examiners constituted for this purpose.

I could make other suggestions but forbear.

I am utterly unselfish in what I have said. I am too old to seek office and too unpopular to secure it if I did. Yet my sympathy and kindest feelings go out to the weary and heavily laden taxpayer, and I would gladly relieve him, if I could. I leave it to them to originate a movement if they choose, on the lines indicated. It is their only hope. Of course, the politicians and bosses, the ward heelers, the office seekers and holders, the pap suckers and entire horde of dirty ball political vagrants as Fitz Mac terms them, would oppose my remedy.

I know my views will be held by many to be very radical, yet the evils I have shown can be remedied only by the most radical remedies.

Here is to an imperial republic extending from sea to sea, with one simple code of law to govern and protect all the inhabitants thereof.

Congressman Allen's Newest Story.

John Allen, whose career in congress has made the little town of Tupelo famous, knows more good stories than any other member of the house. One of the best in his repertory is the tale of the darkey and the 'possum, which was told in the senate cloakroom the other day apropos of the patronage Senator Depew is supposed to enjoy, but which is quietly absorbed by his senior colleague. A negro epicure caught a fine large 'possum, skinned, dressed and hung it before a blazing fire under a spreading tree and while it was baking to a delectable brown, lay down on the ground and went to sleep beside it. About the time the 'possum was done a [illegible] darkey happened that way, stole the 'possum and ate it all up. Then he took the bones and laid them down in front of his sleeping brother, greased his lips with 'possum grease and smeared 'possum grease over his fingers. When the owner of the 'possum awoke he looked about dazed and surprised to find his piece de resistance gone, but the bones lay in front of him, and he saw the grease upon his fingers, and tasted it upon his lips. "Is it possible," he said, "[illegible] 'possum when I was sleep? I smell 'possum, I tas' possum, an' dar is de bones. It sartainly do look lik' I mus' hab eat him, but 'fo' God dat dar 'possum dun hab less 'fect on my constitution dan enny ole 'possum I ever did eat befo'. That is the way with Depew," said the man who repeated this story. "He should have patronage. It looks as if he did have patronage, but 'fo' God dat dar patronage has less 'fect on his constitution dan enny ole patronage he ever did have befo'."—Washington Correspondent of Leslie's Weekly.

Folly of Trustees.

The prevalence of the spirit of professional insubordination and the indifference of trustees toward its existence, says a college president in the April Atlantic, explain why a certain president whose own reputation as a teacher and as an investigator in a certain field is almost as broad as the Union, has been obliged for years to see the work in which he is peculiarly interested and peculiarly expert carried inefficiently, to the detriment of all its students and contrary to the best interests of the institution, which he represents, and which he is earnestly endeavoring to advance in the educational world. This accounts for the fact that the trustees of a certain university persistently neglected the advice of its president, or directly refused to accept it, concerning the work of a certain department; only to lose him at last because, his patience utterly exhausted, he accepted the call of a vastly more important and renowned institution to the direction and control of the very department in which his previous advice had been given no weight. Certainly folly and unwisdom in general management can go no further, but both go to this limit too far often today.

"The night of the El Caney affair," said Gen. Lawton, "when my division was marching back to El Paso to take up a new position the next morning, I was sitting with Maj. G. Creighton Webb, inspector general of my staff, and one of the pluckiest men I know, at the side of the road. My men were filing past, and we watched them. They were tired out, but full of ginger. The day was just beginning to dawn when we heard some one coming down the road, talking at the top of his lungs. He talked and laughed and laughed and talked, and the men with him were chattering and joking.

"'Here come the colored troops,' said Webb, and sure enough the Twenty-fifth infantry came along. The man who was doing the talking was a six-foot corporal. He carried two guns and two cartridge belts loaded full, and the man to whom the extra gun and belt belonged was limping alongside him. The tall corporal was weighted down with his blanket and haversack, but in his arms he carried a dog, the mascot of his company.

"'Here, corporal,' said Webb, 'didn't you march all last night?'

"'Yes, sir,' said the corporal, trying to salute.

"'And didn't you fight all day?'

"'Sure, sir.'

"'And haven't you been marching ever since 10 o'clock tonight?'

"'Yes, sir.'

"'Well, sir,' shouted Webb, 'what in thunder are you carrying that dog for?'

"'Why, boss, the dog's tired,' was the reply.

"Webb just rolled over in the dirt and laughed and cried like a boy."—(Home Circle.

Kekule's Benzene Ring.

In 1856 Perkin discovered the first of the coal tar dyes, creating a new industry which has been assisted beyond [illegible] by the structural symbols that came into use only a few years later. In 1868 alizarin, the coloring principle of madder, was made artificially from the hydrocarbon anthracene; a host of other colors, a veritable chemical rainbow, have been discovered; the synthesis of indigo has been effected, and within 20 years we have seen medicine enriched by a great variety of drugs, all prepared by purely chemical processes from the former waste material—coal tar. To most of this work, at least since 1865, Kekule's conception of the benzene ring has been the guiding clew, and it is certain that without the theory the practice would have advanced much more slowly. Out of research for its own sake has come an enrichment of the world, which in any previous age would have been inconceivable.—(From "A Hundred Years of Chemistry," by Prof. F. W. Clarke, in Appletons' Popular Science Monthly for April.

POLICE CHIEF EDITS A NEWSPAPER AS AN AID IN HIS WORK.

Chief of Police Joseph Kipley, of Chicago, has instituted a novel feature in his work. He issues a newspaper which tells the methods of criminals and offers advice as to the means of foiling them. His experiment is being watched with interest by the police of other cities.

ANACONDA SHIPMENTS

Lessees on Superior Claim Have Sent Out Seven Carloads Recently—Contract for Handling Independence Ore.

Special to the Gazette.

Cripple Creek, June 2.—The lessees on the Superior claim of the Anaconda company closed another carload shipment [illegible]. This makes the [illegible] carload from this lease sent out in a very short period. The ore is estimated to be worth from four to five ounces to the ton. Returns on a four-ton consignment of screenings and 15 tons of coarse quartz were received today. The screenings were settled for at the rate of 22.15 ounces gold or $449 for a ton. The quartz brought $22.20 a ton. The shaft from which this ore has been mined is only 62 feet deep. Drifts running both ways from the vein are in 12 and five feet respectively. The lease with its present showing promises to make a great mine. A good round sum of cash has been refused for a transfer of the lease.

The Murphy Brothers, leasing on the Excelsior claim, another of the Gold Hill holdings of the Anaconda company, are also mining rich mineral. They are preparing to put on a steam hoist. Their ore shows free gold in abundance and the high grade streak in their four-foot vein averages $400 to the ton. There are several inches of this ore.

Closing a Big Contract.

Your correspondent learned tonight from a source absolutely trustworthy that a meeting was arranged for in Denver today between prominent mill men and the managing officials of the Independence mine. This meeting was to be held for the purpose of closing a contract for the handling of the entire output of mill ore from this great property. The mine management [illegible] of this grade of ore per month, the contract to exist for a period of not less than four years. [illegible] this proposition not be accepted on terms favorable to the mine owners, a mill will certainly be constructed by the corporation owning the property.

Black Bell.

Lessees Price and [illegible], operating on the main workings of the Black Bell on the east slope of Beacon hill, are mining great ore. During the last week of May six carloads of mineral were sent out from this property. The values ran from 12 ounces to 17 ounces gold to the ton.

Returns from a 30-ton shipment from the Hynes lease on the Mattie L. of the Jefferson company are just to hand. The ore was settled for on a basis of $50 to the ton. The same lease shipped out a ton yesterday that was returned $40 to the ton. This ore is coming from the 200-foot level, where a new ore body, believed to be the extension of the Half Moon vein, has been uncovered.

The Prospect & Cripple Creek company, leasing on the Bonanza King on Gold hill, closed a 30-ton shipment yesterday. The ore will average about four ounces to the ton.

CASE GOING TO WASHINGTON

Wilson Creek People Will Lay Their Claim to the Hull City Placer Before the Secretary of the Interior.

The case of the Independence T. and M. company against the Wilson Creek company has been taken to Washington, where it will be presented before the secretary of the interior, probably tomorrow, although it may be later in the week. W. A. Otis, one of the prominent men connected with the Wilson Creek company, is now in Washington, and it is understood that practically all the large holders are there to be present when the trouble is taken before the secretary.

This famous litigation, wherein the Wilson Creek company lays claim to the Hull City placer, one of the richest mines in Cripple Creek, was settled in the district court in Cripple Creek several weeks ago, and afterwards appealed to the supreme court at Denver. Although the briefs were filed with that court, it would be impossible for the case to come up for hearing much before a year.

Many of those connected with the Wilson Creek are very rich men who are satisfied that the company has a valid claim to the Hull City placer and to the ore which has already been mined, and they will not spare trouble or money to establish their claim. [illegible] year for a hearing of [illegible] ways of bringing it to a hearing, and finally, with no preliminary announcement, [illegible] the company repaired to Washington with [illegible] attorneys to present the case before the secretary of the interior in the hope that he will make arrangements for the case to be heard on its merits before the department in Washington or [illegible] send it for a hearing before a land office court in Colorado.

The information leaked out yesterday [illegible] that [illegible] would be taken to Washington and it was learned directly after that Mr. W. S. Montgomery had left hastily for Denver so that the information could not be confirmed from that source, but it was learned [illegible] source that the case was to be taken to Washington, and it was also rumored that Mr. Montgomery had gone to Denver to consult Mr. Vaile and make application to the secretary that the hearing be deferred until Mr. Vaile or other legal counsel could reach Washington in behalf of the Hull City placer.

The legal advisers of the Independence T. and M. company in this city were consulted, but refused to discuss the matter. They did not deny, however, that proceedings were to be instituted in Washington, and implied that they knew more of the matter [illegible] the exigencies of their relation [illegible] the case would permit them to say.

The officers of the Independence T. and M. company reiterate their statements that they have nothing to fear from the Wilson Creek company, and that this last move is not by any means a surprise to them, nor one for which they are unprepared. [illegible] that the mine was never in better condition [illegible] and the [illegible] never rested on more secure ground [illegible] and [illegible] with [illegible] have now gone to Washington, and [illegible] this last move will be no more difficult to pass than were the countless [illegible].

The stock of Independence T. and M. yesterday declined to [illegible], and it is likely that after proceedings are again on, the stock will decline even lower. The officials have been besieged by anxious stockholders, for while it is inevitable that the stock must go lower, it is just as [illegible] that it will recover when the Wilson Creek is finally disposed of [illegible] and the [illegible] they are to commence will be [illegible].

The stock of the Wilson Creek company, closely held and [illegible] is [illegible] on the open market. It was, however, called up on the city call yesterday and sold for 12 cents. It is understood that it was previously offered at about 10 cents.

GOLDSTONE GRANTS A LEASE

The Goldstone M. and M. Co. has granted a long lease on its Baby claim to the Universal Leasing company.

The Baby is located on Bull hill and is not far distant from the Isabella and Victor [illegible]. It has always been looked upon as a good prospect, and the lessees hope to make a producer out of it before they get through with the development work outlined. A substantial shaft house has already been erected upon the property and the [illegible] Power company is now running a line of poles and wires to the workings. The shaft will be equipped with a 15-horse power hoist which will be run by electricity. A full line of tools, etc., has also been purchased.

The shaft is now [illegible] feet deep, and a contract has been let to put it down to [illegible]. [illegible] claim [illegible] to show that two veins traverse the ground, one on either side of the shaft. With the end in view of opening up these veins at depth a cross cut will be run both ways from the bottom of the shaft as soon as the 300-foot mark is reached.

The Universal Leasing company is backed by eastern and local capital.

FINDLEY LEASE CHANGES HANDS

The Parkison and Scofield lease finally changed hands yesterday. There has been more or less talk about the transaction, but the deal was not finally [illegible].

The price paid for the lease by Mr. J. H. White, the purchaser, was $7,500 cash. It is understood that he has a good many months yet to work the property.

The present shaft is an incline [illegible] on the vein and Mr. White will start an entirely new one to a depth of 400 feet to start with. It will probably be a double compartment shaft, but at any rate one of good dimensions.

The lessee has 12 feet of ore in sight, [illegible] is no surprise that so big a price was [illegible] the lease of that so much expense and development work has been [illegible] upon.

The Findley claim is on Bull hill and [illegible] of the Findley Gold Mining company. [illegible] developments [illegible] the discovery of a large body of producing ore within its lines was a matter only to be expected.

MINING NOTES AROUND TOWN

A suit was filed yesterday in the district court entitled Charles Schiele and [illegible] versus the Granite Hill Mining and Milling company, et al. The plaintiffs petition the court for the appointment of a receiver for the company, an injunction to prevent the officers [illegible] of the company and for an accounting of the [illegible] made between the [illegible] Granite Hill claim [illegible] have by no means forgotten [illegible] have a splendid thing, which cannot [illegible] involved in litigation. It is understood that just as soon as the required shipments have been made application will be made to the listing committee of the old Exchange for [illegible] among the mines.

THE ANCHORIA-LELAND WILL WORK CONUNDRUM.

[illegible] Anchoria-Leland company has [illegible] the [illegible] claim. For two years the property has been worked by Kirth and [illegible] who [illegible] the ground to [illegible] depth. The [illegible] which returned an average [illegible] to the ton [illegible] Jessie [illegible].

NUGGET WILL SOON BE A "SHIPPING MINE."

[illegible] shipping mine. It has been said for the [illegible] of $12,000 [illegible] Nugget has [illegible] of the [illegible] Nugget [illegible] among the [illegible] Stocks. The workings [illegible] establish to the Jack Pot [illegible] and the [illegible]

CRESTON LEASING COMPANY ISN'T WORKING MINNEHAHA

[illegible] Minnehaha claim [illegible] Leasing [illegible] company [illegible] the Creston Leasing company and [illegible] a [illegible] rate, and [illegible]

pany is actively engaged on the north half of the claim.

CROSS CUTTING ON THE BONNIE NELL.

At the depth of 200 feet in the Bonnie Nell mine on Raven hill the company has cut the station and is now cross cutting in two directions. The cross-cut to the north is directed to cut the vein which was encountered in the shaft, but which dipped out of it, and the west cross-cut is making for a phonolite dyke known to cross the property. Both cross-cuts have progressed [illegible] thirty feet and in the west one the phonolite is already beginning to show. The company expects to find the extension of the Joe Dandy vein along this dyke.

DEEP DEVELOPMENT ON THE MATOA MINE.

In the Matoa mine on Gold hill work is now vigorously in progress cutting the station at the depth of 1,000 feet. Sinking will also be carried ten or fifteen feet further so as to make a sump. As soon as the preliminary work is finished, which will take from two to three weeks, two drifts will be started on the vein with the purpose of opening the ore chute at this depth. It cannot be determined just now how much work must be done before ore is encountered, as the vein carried little or no ore in several of the levels above for some distance. Development work [illegible] will be watched with the greatest interest as it will prove just what Gold hill will produce at this depth.

THE COLORADO SPRINGS MINING STOCK EXCHANGE

Colorado Springs, June [illegible]. The market [illegible] weak to[illegible] [illegible] stocks made a bad break and although there were some which showed a certain amount of strength there were in the minority. Among the higher priced stocks Elkton was about the only one which did not [illegible]. Isabella, which started at [illegible] and reached [illegible] declined again to $1[illegible] and Portland lost 11 cents at one fell swoop. Yesterday a board lot was sold for $3[illegible] and this morning the first sale was made at $3 and several thousand went at $3[illegible]. At the [illegible] $3.15 [illegible] and no offer.

This drop in Portland is not surprising. Its big jump was too sudden and mining men have expected to see it go back [illegible] $3 [illegible] this. Not because the shares are not worth $3[illegible] but that any stock which takes a sudden leap is bound to settle.

Anaconda keeps up well. It sold for 34 cents this morning and the trading was heavy. Mater also sold for 34 [illegible]. That is a cent in advance of the price to which it advanced yesterday. This stock will probably be in good demand [illegible] that [illegible] work is going to be prosecuted at the depth of 1,000 feet [illegible] M[illegible] Anchor [illegible]

But [illegible] [illegible] were [illegible] still [illegible] high [illegible] [illegible] had anticipated [illegible] into Ingram [illegible] would [illegible] the stock [illegible] drop [illegible] this trouble with the [illegible] will [illegible] for the [illegible] page [illegible]

Among the [illegible] unlisted stocks [illegible] fractionally and [illegible] but no especial features were developed.

The trading [illegible] when it is considered that only one call was held. There were 43,000 shares exchanged, the total cash value being $[illegible]. The number [illegible] large as the total for two calls [illegible] yesterday. During the week [illegible] 30 [illegible] shares were exchanged [illegible] cash value [illegible] $4[illegible]. There were two calls omitted on Memorial day.

Arrogant Professors

This assumption of absolute independence on the part of the heads of departments [illegible] in some cases as to furnish the [illegible] ad absurdum, says a college president in the April Atlantic. But [illegible] must go to the board even after that, and thus far the board has [illegible] sustain [illegible] the department [illegible] silent even to inquire as to [illegible] methods of my department [illegible] more than usual reputation as an investigator [illegible] an instructor [illegible] manager [illegible] inquire [illegible] department [illegible] simply [illegible] an insult [illegible] further inquiries [illegible] Surely this [illegible] could [illegible] neither satisfied nor dissatisfied [illegible] information. [illegible] cents a month—The Gazette

$2,250,000

Was the output in gold of the Cripple Creek mines for the month of March. This is at the rate of $27,000,000 for the year 1900. Unless the threatened shut-down of many mines occurs, on account of excessive transportation and reduction charges, the output will exceed $27,000,000, and may reach $30,000,000. This is a wonderful record for a district only nine years old, but it is only the beginning. The number of producing and dividend paying mines is steadily increasing and it will be years before the maximum output of the mines is reached.

WHY ARE PRICES FALLING?

I am receiving numerous inquiries from all over the United States why many stocks are falling in price in spite of the splendid condition of the mines. INFLATION IS THE CAUSE. Owing to this splendid condition of the [illegible] owing to the immense output of gold from the good mines, it has been possible for some companies to float their stocks at far above the intrinsic value of their properties. Other stocks have advanced through sympathy with good stocks or through shrewd manipulation far beyond any price warranted by the development, present condition or future prospects of their mining claims. These fictitious valuations could not be maintained and a reaction was inevitable. Nicely worded prospectuses filled with "glittering generalities" and extravagant promises may sell stock, reports of big strikes and exhibits of high assays may satisfy the purchaser for a time but soon or late the truth becomes known. If a claim is shipping a few tons of ore per month the agony is often prolonged and the public led to believe that another dividend payer is budding out.

It is the flotation of so many of these inflated stocks that is causing a steady drop in prices, and the threatened shut-down of the mines is not the prime cause, but only gives another shove.

The market moves up or down usually as a whole. Many good stocks ha[illegible] [illegible] selling far below their actual value. These stocks will react and are now splendid investments.

WEED OUT YOUR INFLATED STOCKS

The longer you hang on to them, hoping for a turn, the more money you will lose. Among the worst inflated stocks on the list in my opinion, are ALERT, ALAMO, COLORADO CITY AND MANITOU, GOLD SOVEREIGN, LEXINGTON, NATIONAL, PAPPOOSE, POINTER and VOLCANO. All of these are a sale down to one-third or one quarter of their present selling price.

INDIA RELIEF WORK

Missionary Well Known in Colorado Springs Writes of What Is Being Done Apart from Government Relief Camps.

The following letter from a missionary in India, Miss [illegible] A. Fairbank, well known in Colorado Springs, was received by the pastor of the First Congregational church during the past week. It is of especial interest at this time, showing what is being done to relieve famine distress apart from the government relief camps:

Ahmednagar, India,
April 6, 1900.

Rev. James B. Gregg, D. D., Colorado Springs, Colo.

Dear Dr. Gregg—I have just directed a cover to you which encloses a report of our mission for the year 1899. In it you will find on page 36 following a statement concerning the work in which I am engaged at present. That statement though written three months ago will answer still to show you the general character of the work.

In this higher educational work we aim at two things [illegible] a section of the community that can be reached in no other way. This section includes the educated young men of the community. These men will not listen to your preaching in the street. They will rarely come to church. They are all intent on getting education as a means of getting a livelihood. These are learning to scoff at idolatry and the customs of their fathers while yet they have not the manliness to break loose from the trammels of caste and the outward observance of the superstitions that they despise. We get them into the school and teach them the Bible five times a week and they have acknowledged again and again that the [illegible] by them. We [illegible] an intimate acquaintance with them. They go out warm friends of the [illegible] and with a respect for Christ [illegible] and Christ, and there will come a time when there will be an awakening among these men, a breathing of the breath of life into the dry bones. It [illegible] yet, and the converts among the educated high caste young men of India to Christianity are still few and far between. The social ad[illegible] and the [illegible] of their [illegible] still too great a burden to [illegible].

[illegible] chief [illegible] is to give a good [illegible] such of our Christian [illegible] worthy of receiving [illegible]. The [illegible] surprised the higher castes [illegible] used to have a [illegible] education than the [illegible] which these boys and girls [illegible] father and mother [illegible] to books. The [illegible] the four highest grades [illegible] boys.

[illegible] our own work here [illegible]. The most of the teachers [illegible] and experienced and [illegible] gone smoothly. In another week the vacation begins. The hottest part of the year comes in April and May and then comes the rainy season, which should begin in June, and we hope the opening of the school the first week in June will be an abatement of the terribly dry weather that has prevailed now for almost 10 months.

The famine that has been the result of this dry weather has been recorded in the papers in America and the ready response of the people of America to the appeals sent from here has been very helpful and gratifying to us in the midst of the distress. There are two kinds of famine work that I have been engaged in and I should like to tell you something about this.

In the first place there have been orphan boys brought for me to care for. To-day there has been a regular string of men and boys who have [illegible]. Hunger is the motive that impels them to come and all thought of caste or pollution is thrown to the winds when food is presented to them. When they [illegible] it seems as if they could not get enough to eat, and they must be given an extra amount for a couple of weeks or so till the body resumes its normal condition. Some of the ladies here are taking women with children, and [illegible] that it is difficult to keep the mothers from eating the children's food. So now they try to feed the children separately from the mother to [illegible] allowance of food. These little children I do not take ordinarily. I have boys from 7 to 12 years of age and the fathers and mothers of such as have fathers and mothers are not allowed in the dormitory where these boys live. By way of explanation I should say that orphan boys mean rather deserted boys. The fathers and mothers of many come and say "we cannot get enough to feed these children, take care of them." Some are really without father and mother. Last night a cartload of 16 small children were brought to me, five girls and 11 boys, such forlorn specimens [illegible] without a stitch of clothing on. These were sent by a government county officer 40 miles to the south of here. Two weeks ago another officer sent 11 [illegible], and there are communications from others to ask if we will take charge of children whom they have in charge.

They secure these children in the great relief camps and put them in a special place by themselves where they can be cared for till some one [illegible] to take them. It sometimes seems strange to me that the Hindus do not take them, but it is true that they do not unless stirred up to do so by the sight of what the missionaries are doing. Among the children that came last night were three or four boys of about four or five years old and it was a most pathetic sight to look at them, listless and tired. They sat around until one of them said that one of the others was thirsty and then they all drank the water so [illegible] to see them sitting without father or mother made a great lump rise in my throat. I have been trying to find a good family where I can put them.

Most of these boys are utterly without a knowledge of reading and writing, and they are starting in with avidity with their books and slates. The older ones I am going to put into the rug weaving class as soon as they are fit for it.

This rug weaving class is the other branch of famine work in which I am engaged. Mr. Smith started it some two or three years ago and about a year ago a factory was set in operation here. This factory belongs to a [illegible] company called "The Indian Mission Industries Limited." The rugs manufactured are what you would call Persian rugs. The warp is of cotton and is stretched tightly on a stiff upright loom. The figures are worked in by [illegible] to this cotton warp by hand and the yarn used for the figures is woolen [illegible] and girls who are of the [illegible] and quick can learn the business enough to earn a living wage in four to six months. I have now about 40 learning and am going to get in more. The factory takes those [illegible] as fast as I can train them and give them work. They are paid by the amount they do and not by a day wage. One boy who has been working in the factory a year earned the last month about $2. Another one who has been in the business for a longer time earned $3. The fathers and mothers of these factory workers are now getting less than $1 a month on relief camps and the ordinary wage for day laborers in good times is about $1 a month, so we consider those [illegible] who have earned from $1.50 to $3 during month have done well. These boys are still to be considered as [illegible]. They do not work as fast or as carefully as they will in another year.

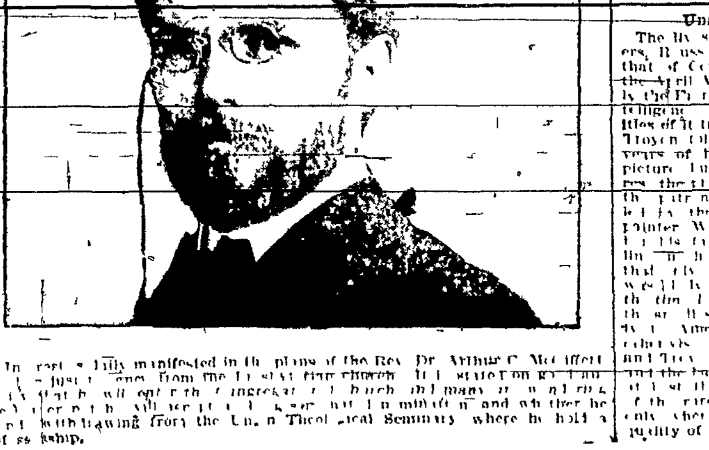
This work I consider a famine relief work, because the boys and girls who are [illegible] living would be on relief camps earning two and one half [illegible] a day if it were not for this school. The deserted children who are coming to us are also gradually being put into this class and will be able to earn their living before the year is out. They have no education to start with and find it more difficult to learn than those who have studied three or four grades. This is the [illegible] work in which I am myself engaged. The other missionaries here are all as busy as I in their own line. We only regret that time and strength fail us to do all that we should do in this utmost blessed work.

To give you an illustration of what is being done I will tell you what I heard tonight. Some two or three weeks ago a poor woman came to Miss Nugent and asked to be cared for. She [illegible] her in and cared for her. In a day or two the woman came with tears in her eyes saying she had sold her child, a girl, to some people a day or two before. [illegible] bought her paid but rupees 33 cents for her. This little girl was finally found today and brought back [illegible] girl make a trade of buying girls and [illegible] rupees. The sum of four rupees ($1.33) had to be paid before the people who had bought her would give her up.

I have been writing today with my clothes reduced to the minimum on account of the heat. I often just now think of the cold of the spring at Colorado Springs and what difference there is between that place and this. This however is not quite as hot as some places in India. The nights [illegible] are very comfortable and there are so many things to do that I do not get much time to think whether it is hot or not.

With Christian greetings to all I am
Very sincerely yours,
H. Fairbank.

REV. DR. A. C. McGIFFERT



Interest is fully manifested in the plans of the Rev. Dr. Arthur C. McGiffert [illegible] from the Presbyterian church. It is stated [illegible] that he will enter the Congregational church [illegible] withdrawing from the Union Theological Seminary, where he holds a professorship.

Is the Philippine War Over?

That the [illegible] rains and also [illegible] in the [illegible] and [illegible] as well as fringes of the coast [illegible] is true. But that the [illegible] experiment [illegible] the rainy season [illegible] still [illegible] Luzon [illegible]. One of the vital points [illegible] neglected until [illegible] and is now but tentatively taken [illegible] is that of [illegible] the rainy season starts. We can but look forward to a repetition of the terrible circumstances which [illegible] San Isidro [illegible] the roads were but [illegible] less mud [illegible] worked from dawn till midnight thirty [illegible] of the mud. The bulls [illegible] and sometimes the men alone had to take the carts along [illegible] by the way. [illegible] wheels [illegible] pick their way through brush and forest [illegible] pack mules can find support for their feet [illegible] lesson is obvious but it has [illegible] disregarded and instead of [illegible] an army [illegible] of mules [illegible] the rainy season [illegible] transportation for supplies [illegible] the last rainy season. That the [illegible] around lands of sufficient [illegible] and [illegible] outlying positions [illegible] moment. The rainy season [illegible] prompt [illegible] impossible [illegible]. The army is conscious of the [illegible] understanding it, and has not yet formed an engineer corps sufficient to carry out [illegible] construction of bridges [illegible] only a short time ago that this army of 65,000 men [illegible] the work of [illegible] companies of engineers. After being a year in the country this state of affairs seems incredible.—(Manila Correspondent of Leslie's Weekly.

Unappreciated Genius.

The lives of these three great painters, Rousseau, Millet and Troyon, like that of Corot, says W. J. Stillman in the April Atlantic, show how completely the French public [illegible] intelligence [illegible] of it till outsiders pointed to them. Troyon told me that for the first ten years of his career he never sold a picture, but lived by painting for Sevres; the prosperity of Millet came from the patronage of America [illegible] the appreciation of [illegible] painter William Hunt, I well remember [illegible] which [illegible] that [illegible] Millet [illegible] at the time [illegible] glad to accept [illegible] America [illegible] Millet [illegible] and Troyon [illegible] public taste and the [illegible] of genius only when it has ceased to have the quality of the new and unforeseen.

MARY SANDERS, A BEAUTIFUL AND TALENTED YOUNG ACTRESS.

Miss Mary Sanders, the sunny haired little comedienne who recently closed a starring tour in "The Old Curiosity Shop," in which she emulated the example of Lotta by doubling the widely different roles of Little Nell and the Marchioness, has been engaged to originate the principal ingenue role of Ora Lanes in Joseph Arthur's latest play of life in southern Indiana entitled "Lost River." The character is said to be to a certain extent a counterpart of June in "Blue Jeans," Mr Arthur's most celebrated success. While Miss Sanders differs from the ordinary soubrette in that there is a note of refinement in all her work, she doubtless excels in such quaint comedy types. Thus her creation of the Marchioness came as a surprise, although Miss Sanders has long been a favorite in Washington, Boston and other cities. Polly Eccles in "Caste" is another of her celebrated parts, and she also scored success as the amateur Juliet in "Her Last Rehearsal."

Miss Sanders graduated from a school of acting and shortly afterward played small parts in one of Charles Frohman's companies. Then she joined the National theater stock company in Washington. For three seasons she was a favorite in the national capital and when after a brief tour as a member of [illegible] Mansfield's company she joined the Castle Square company in Boston she was not long in establishing herself as a prime favorite in the Hub. For three seasons she played the whole round of soubrettes and ingenue roles in current English drama. Then followed the starring in "The Old Curiosity Shop."

MINING REVIEW OF THE WEEK

Details of the Various Mining Transactions Which Have Taken Place and News of Strikes and Shipments at Camp.

The activity displayed in development work in all parts of the Cripple Creek [illegible] leading to the uncovering of [illegible] ore bodies in various claims [illegible] and leasing is a notable [illegible] of the record of the week. Details of this development work, of strikes and shipments and of doings among Cripple Creek corporations will be found in the following columns:

DEVELOPMENT NEWS

Following are particulars of the development work under way, accomplished or projected in the district:

Handmade.

Mr Joseph Ryan today let a contract to Jake Keir for an additional 50 feet of crosscutting on the Handmade of the [illegible] Co. property, south of the Hoosier. The crosscutting is being done 120 feet from surface.

Little Cut Diamond.

Work will be started on Monday next on the North Slope claim of the Little Cut Diamond Co. This property adjoins the Gold Knob and Gold Field claims. For the last two years the Little Cut Diamond Co. has been at law and that too in the highest court in the land, but now it is claimed all litigation is at an end and the officers of the company propose to develop the 11 acres of ground to which they now think they have perfect title.

Damon.

The Damon workings are now being unwatered by the Consolidated Gold [illegible] Co., which means the Woods people. The flow of water could not be controlled perceptibly for 24 hours, but now with a bucket that carries 120 gallons and that is emptied every minute during the 24 hours, headway is at last being made.

Spring Creek D. M. and D. Co.

President and Manager F. W. Keene of the Spring Creek Deep Mining and Development Co. is in town preparing [illegible] a contract for extending his tunnel an additional 1,000 feet. He has made contracts within the last few days with the owners of property whose ground he crosses for drainage and [illegible] [illegible] The tunnel is on the north slope of Tenderfoot hill and its course is about east. If the bore is continued as proposed, development upon it will be watched [illegible] more than general interest.

Little Maggie.

A plant of machinery is now in place on the Little Maggie that lies on the south end of the Independence and Jefferson properties at Victor. The intention is to deepen the shaft 100 feet and then to crosscut the property. Manager [illegible] Swisher has ample funds at his command to prosecute the work.

Hermosa Claims.

[illegible] took a bond and lease on the Hermosa and First Chance claims of the [illegible] company [illegible] started work on the property, and [illegible] extensive development work [illegible] it is believed will be very [illegible] The main shaft on the property is now down to a depth of 100 feet, and there have been occasional signs in the shaft of the presence of an ore body at a greater depth, and the lessee intends to sink an additional 400 feet at once.

Jack Pot.

An important piece of work was started recently on the Doctor mine in the [illegible] level of the property. The Jack Pot [illegible] the richest bone of contention which two mining companies ever fought for in Cripple Creek, at least, will be proved up beyond a doubt if the lessee is successful. Mr. Watson, lessee, on this block, will begin a drift through the disputed territory. The two companies have agreed upon this course, [illegible] of both will result as much upon the work done as with the court. The proceeds of the ore taken out, which will probably run very high, will be saved, and will go to the company in whose favor the court decides. The case [illegible] come up in a week or two now. Meantime the work is going desperately on in the Elizabeth Cooper of the Nugget, in the endeavor to prove that the vein apexes on their ground, and the company claims that the work which is being done is very satisfactory [illegible] pointing to the fact in which they [illegible] entertained so much confidence: [illegible] Jack Pot [illegible]

Nellie V.

The Nellie V. company, working with [illegible] construction of a shaft house on its [illegible] ready a 30-horse power electric [illegible] will be installed by the Colorado Electric company.

El Paso.

The new machinery which the El Paso company is going to install over their shaft on Beacon hill is arriving and will be put in place directly. The fine 26x40 hoist capable of operating a shaft 1,000 feet deep arrived yesterday, and as the foundations had been prepared previously it is understood that there will be no delay in getting it in place. Although the shaft is only going to the depth of [illegible] feet at present, enough cable has been bought to operate to a depth of 1,000 feet and it is likely that the shaft will be continued to that depth not long after its present destination is reached. By the time the machinery is in place an [illegible] drill air compressor will have arrived, which will then be put in place. [illegible] The company's property will compete with the equipment of a great many large mines in hills that have a much better reputation than Beacon. The property is [illegible] in fine condition, the company [illegible] lessees both working in good ore, and no shipments marketed that run less than $100 to the ton.

Altamont.

[illegible] for the sinking of a two compartment shaft to a depth of 400 feet on the Altamont group on Tenderfoot hill by the Tenderfoot Consolidated G. M. Co.

Morning Glory.

Carson and Pelland commenced work last week on a new vertical shaft which will be made in the new workings of their lease on the Morning Glory No. 4. The lease has yet two years and seven months to run. The contract will be for 300 feet or [illegible] at which depth they expect to [illegible] their vein on its dip. These lessees closed a 50 ton shipment of mill [illegible] Tuesday. It was consigned to [illegible] cyanide works at Florence and is estimated to return values of $30 a ton. From the shipment sent to Pueblo last week these lessees received values equivalent to 25 ounces to the ton on [illegible] and 6 ounces to the ton for 29 tons.

Ida May.

Ingersoll and associates, operating on the main workings of the Ida May, situated on the south end of the Raven property, resumed work Wednesday morning after an enforced idleness of several weeks caused by seepage water. The flow has now subsided and no further trouble is anticipated from this source. The shaft is already 235 feet deep and sinking will be continued.

Two new leases have been granted on the north 100 feet blocks of the Little Clara and Ida May claims. They run for 18 months and are made out to S. A. Stafford and Hickman Tudor. A royalty of 25 per cent. is exacted in each instance.

Mineral Assets Co.

The Mineral Assets company, Ltd., an English corporation, is prosecuting considerable work about a mile and a half southwest of Mt. Pisgah. They have a steam plant installed and are sinking a deep working shaft. Surface workings have disclosed the presence of large bodies of low grade ores, whose value it is hoped will be increased with depth.

Antelope.

The lessees on the Antelope of the Colomont company have let another contract for [illegible] feet of sinking. The shaft is already 160 feet deep. The claim is situated near the Hoosier on Tenderfoot hill.

Easter Bell Co.

J. P. Sweeney, president and eastern manager of the Easter Bell G. M. company, returned to camp Monday. He reports the purchasing of a big plant of machinery in Denver. The plant has already been shipped and will be installed without delay over the shaft now being sunk on the company's property. Four hundred feet of [illegible] contracted and the contractors are now busy at work. The sinking of a deep shaft on this property has aroused considerable interest. It will be watched closely by mining men. The success of the venture means the development of a big acreage, at present but little prospected.

STRIKE NEWS

C. C. Columbia.

In an upraise from the drift at the 200-foot level in the Cripple Creek Columbia property on Beacon hill a strong body of ore has lately been encountered. The pay streak is 20 inches in width and the values run better than four ounces to the ton. As this shoot is explored it continues to improve, and a larger force of men will be put to work [illegible] The crosscut from this shaft run in search of the parallel vein is still being extended, but the vein has not been cut so far and it is thought that it probably has a strong dip which was not foreseen when the calculations of reaching it in about 65 feet of work were made. There is no doubt that it will be cut, however, as stringers are constantly coming into the crosscut which run pay, and the [illegible] stains are very pronounced.

Dillon.

The management of the Dillon property [illegible] up the strike made recently at the depth of 700 feet from the surface [illegible] the ore has not [illegible] progressed. The vein is now between five and twelve feet wide. Although the ore does not run high, it is all of a pay value, and the character of the shoot at this depth leads the management to believe that a big shipper will be the result when the ore is opened at greater depth. Work will be started at once in sinking for another lift, and machinery will be installed at once capable of working the mine at greater depth.

National.

Although the manager of the National company has inspected the lessees' workings and reports the strike to be less glowing than it has been pictured, the lessees are very confident and express themselves to the effect that they certainly have a fine shipper.

On the company's Red Bird property in Cottontail gulch, the ore shoot has been opened at the 400-foot level, but when the third one was cut the lessees were unable to find ore. Encouraged, however, by the discovery in the lowest level, they again began work in the third and found that the drift had been run just to one side of the ore. Just as soon as the [illegible] shipping will begin at once.

The lessees [illegible] assays, one running into the thousand dollars to the ton, and almost beautiful specimen was shown to a Gazette representative yesterday by an officer of the company which comes from a rich streak in the National and is almost all gold.

Although the lessees are sorting ore and claim that they have got a paying proposition, the officers are still rather dubious, and await a proof that the shoot will be consistent before committing themselves to the assertion that a big strike has been made.

Roanoke.

A strike has been made on Mineral hill which in any other camp but Cripple Creek would create unusual excitement. Here strikes are of such common occurrence that they furnish [illegible] a few hours. Mineral hill was the first love of the old time prospectors. Many a miner of that stamp has worked arduously for daily wages on other hills to return and expend his hard earned money [illegible] No other hill in the camp has made such surface showing. Placer [illegible] made big money. Nuggets worth as much as [illegible] have been panned from the surface [illegible] the placer dirt on the southwest slope of the hill. Yet no one has succeeded in locating the source of the pay dirt. Even now it is not the old timer, but in comparison with him a tenderfoot, who has made the find and given to Mineral hill a new lease of life. A young Bostonian named Burns arrived first in camp about a year ago. He [illegible] over the camp, returned home and advised his friends as to his experiences. A few months ago he returned to camp and immediately work on a big scale was started on the Roanoke claim on Mineral hill. The usual pointed remarks about "foolish expenditure" by a tenderfoot of course followed. Tonight [illegible] Burns [illegible] is the talk of the camp for the night.

In a crosscut driven from a depth of 125 feet a vein 15 feet in width has been passed through [illegible] Superintendent Hines tonight are as follows: 4 inches blue quartz, $21.60 a ton; 18 inches phonolite, $12.50; 4 to 5 inches sand quartz, $66.40 to the ton. Assays on the remainder of the big vein so far as tested run from a few dollars to pay. The claim is situated directly at the head of Hayden street, a continuation of Third street, Cripple Creek city, back of the reservoir. Adjoining it lies the First Chance claim of the Hermosa, on which F. O. Wood of Colorado Springs has recently taken a bonded lease. The vein has a northwest and southeasterly trend, which should carry it through this claim.

Orizaba.

The Mike Burke lease on the middle block of the Orizaba of the El Paso company, situated on the west slope of Beacon hill, is getting values of from 10 to 15 ounces to the ton. From repeated assays tests on a six inch streak found in the five foot vein, which he is drifting on the 45 foot level, the bulk of the lead, which is a phonolyte quartz, will average about one ounce to the ton. The crosscut is also being driven to the vein at a depth of 100 feet from the surface.

Ida May.

An assay of 150 ounces gold to the ton was secured recently from a sample of ore taken from a narrow seam showing in the drift in the 215 foot level of the Ida May property of the Estella G. M. Co. The ore was encountered Friday, when a change occurred in the vein from which a little ore has already been shipped. The force at the mine has been increased. The control of this company was recently placed in the east and the property is now being steadily operated.

Valuable Lots.

E. R. Young purchased the Hill lots just west of the Midland Terminal freight depot. While engaged in digging foundations for an outhouse today he disclosed a three-foot vein of mineral in the granite. The mineral when panned showed free gold. The samples taken across the vein have not yet been heard from, but should they prove favorable, Mr. Young will mine instead of building on [illegible]

Little Pedro.

Watt and McConnell, who are leasing on the Little Pedro, at 250 feet, have four feet of ore showing. A shipment of 40 tons will go out tomorrow that it is expected will average three ounces. The Little Pedro is owned by the Jerry Johnson. The lessees are putting up big ore houses and within the next 30 days or possibly a fortnight another shipment will be made.

Hoosier.

It will be good news to all people interested [illegible] to learn the Austin lease on the Hoosier is again in good pay. The shoot has been once more opened, this time at the 700 foot level, but what direction from the shaft the people on the property refuse to divulge.

La Bella.

The Ross & Lyons Leasing company has opened up what looks like a tremendously rich ore shoot on the La Bella of the Golden Cycle Co. at Goldfield. From a shaft now [illegible] feet deep a trial shipment of 12 tons was sent out last week. This rock ran at the rate of $50 a ton. Since this first shipment development has [illegible] a body of ore that is so rich that not only are the miners employed on the property carefully watched, but the lessees in turn find that they are also being carefully guarded by representatives or detectives in the employ of the [illegible]

The new strike on the La Bella is so [illegible] that [illegible] the miners who are [illegible] a word concerning the underground workings of the property. The lessees [illegible] they are in a tremor of excitement all the time. They are constantly running to the telephone office of the property and ordering ore sacks. From all that can be learned on the outside this recent strike on the La Bella is one of the most important so far inside in the greatest gold camp on earth.

Burns.

A strike has just been made on the Burns claim of the Acacia company on Bull hill which is one of the most important of recent developments. In the bottom of a winze sunk from a drift in the 200-foot level, Wrockloff, the lessee, has five and a half feet of ore which will run from $100 to $250 in gold to the ton.

SHIPMENT NEWS

A few of the many shipments of ore sent out in the past [illegible] are recorded below:

Columbia.

John Harbes, who is leasing on the Columbia on Beacon hill, last Thursday made a shipment of about 12 tons of [illegible] ore. This comes from a 9-inch streak in a stope at the 300 foot level. In a crosscut at 65 feet west it is believed that the main El Paso vein has at last been encountered and for the good reason that here a strong [illegible]

Rigi.

A shipment of [illegible] tons which was recently sent out from the lease of the main workings of the Rigi mine returned an average of $70 to the ton. Active work is going on on the property, both in the main shaft and on the north end of the claim which is also [illegible] shaft here is down 112 feet, and the lessees are going to extend it to the 200-foot point immediately. They have been much hampered by seepage water, and are only now able to resume sinking.

Jeff Davis.

A. B. Jones' lease on the Jeff Davis of the Lexington company, closed a 20-ton shipment Tuesday. Included in the consignment are [illegible] sacks of very high grade mineral which has been in bank vaults for safe keeping. The bulk of the ore will average $250 a ton.

Gould.

Dan Weyand, superintendent of the Gould company, closed a three carload shipment Tuesday from the Jennie Sample claim. Two carloads were of smelting grade and one of mill ore.

Mary L.

Coriolanus.

Superintendent Smith of the Coriolanus closed a 25-ton shipment of 2-ounce ore Friday and will start a like tonnage of smelting grade mineral, estimated to be worth from 4 to 6 ounces to the ton in the morning.

Friday.

Shuck, Holland and O'Connor, leasing on the Friday, adjoining the Hoosier on Tenderfoot hill, made a shipment of [illegible] the consignment.

Atlantis.

The Atlantis Mine corporation, which recently secured the Heath & Conant lease on the Santa Rita on Squaw mountain, marketed rich ore Friday. About half a ton of mineral carefully sacked is estimated to return values of over $6,000 a ton, or some $3,000 for the lot. In addition 30 tons of 3-ounce ore was shipped to the smelter.

Garfield Grouse.

Seventy-five tons of high grade smelting ore were sent from the Garfield Grouse Thursday. This ore has been accumulating for some time. A well confirmed rumor circulated here that the property will change ownership in the near future.

Modoc.

The Modoc mine made a total production [illegible] during the month just closed. The value of the ore averaged [illegible] ounces to the ton.

[illegible]

The [illegible] is again adding to the output of the camp. Lessees Osgood and Parker Thursday shipped [illegible] tons to a local sampler, and with it a small consignment of high grade mineral worth 20 to 30 ounces of gold to the ton.

Output for May.

The output of the Cripple Creek district has again reached a total above the $2,000,000 mark. Actual figures show [illegible] tons of a bullion value of $2,050,400. The leading companies with their heavy shipments of smelting ore are directly responsible for the increase. A number of these made records.

Several of the mills, especially those at Florence, were in a measure handicapped by the incipient strike of the switchmen of the F. & C. C. road at Victor, and for several days these plants received no cars, yet they gave a good account of themselves. The mills treated 31,128 tons of a bullion value of $905,400.

The smelters reduced 6,000 tons of ore to bullion worth $1,120,000. Figures as reported by the different mill managers are:

Metallic Extraction company, Florence, 8,500 tons, average value $25; total, $212,500.

El Paso Reduction company, Florence, 2,500 tons of an average value of $30 a ton, total, $75,000.

The Colorado-Philadelphia Reduction company at Colorado City, 9,500 tons of $34 ore; total value $323,000.

The Economic mill of the Woods company treated 3,000 tons of $25 ore; value, $75,000.

The Colorado Ore Reduction company at Arequa, 1,800 tons of $25 ore, $45,000.

The Gillette mill, 2,000 tons of $30 ore, $60,000. For June this mill expects to handle from 500 to 1,000 tons above this total. There are already 70 broad gauge cars of ore on the tracks at the mill, while the bins are loaded.

The Brodie mill, at Mound City handled 1,321 tons of $25 ore; total $33,100.

The Atlas mill at Boulder figures for the first time among plants treating Cripple Creek ores. This [illegible] reduced 700 tons of ore of an average value of $35, total, $24,500.

The miscellaneous small plants were responsible for the reduction of ore to the value of $25,000. These figures make a grand total of $2,050,400, as [illegible]

Santa Rita.

A shipment is being saved from the Santa Rita mine, on Squaw mountain, and a consignment of 30 tons will be marketed from the property on Monday next. The rock is estimated to return on average of $250 in gold to the ton; and there is also some very rich ore being sacked which will return better than $1 a pound. The drift at the 400-foot level in which the strike was made is being extended and has now attained the distance of about 40 feet from the shaft. At this distance there is [illegible] inches of ore which will run all the way from $100 to $2,000 to the ton. If the present shoot holds out, the Santa Rita will become one of the largest mines in the vicinity.

Ingham.

The lease of the Raven company officials on the Ingham has shipped during the last ten days about 225 tons of ore averaging close to three ounces to the ton.

Jerry Johnson.

A shipment was sent out Monday from the Watt and McConnell lease on the Little Pedro of the Jerry Johnson company. The [illegible] will consist of between 40 and 50 tons taken from the drift on the shoot recently opened up at the depth of 250 feet. The pay streak is about [illegible] inches [illegible] [illegible] being erected and every preparation made to facilitate production [illegible] Johnson shipper.

Eclipse.

Parkinson and Schofield, lessees on the Eclipse of the New Haven, made a shipment early in the week of 10 tons of smelting ore that will be consigned to the Arkel Works at Denver. The lessees have out two lots of 30 tons of [illegible] which no returns so far have been received. The winze from which this mineral has been obtained starts from the 120 foot level and has now attained a depth of 135 feet and the bottom is still in good pay. The limits of the shoot have so far been determined.

Ingham.

The Carndiff lease on the Ingham shipped 15 tons of $40 ore the first of the week.

Republic.

From the Ross contract on the Republic [illegible] Mary McKinney [illegible] output this month will be about 300 tons, two-thirds of which will be of smelting grade. Development on this end of the Mary McKinney goes to show that the shoot opened [illegible] for some thousand feet or more is continuous in its southerly course.

Coriolanus.

Two cars of ore went out Monday from the Coriolanus on Battle mountain. This lot comes from the north shaft of the property and has been [illegible] It is said that all portions of the property and [illegible] is being taken, look exceedingly well.

Work.

Returns have been received on a shipment sent out from the Carlson and Pelland lease on the middle block of the Morning Glory No. 4 of the Work company. The shipment consisted of 80 tons, 70 tons being of the first grade and 10 of the second. The former returned $500 to the ton and the latter $120. The upper level upon which the lessees have been working is now stoped to the surface, but they are also working on the one below and are at the same time prospecting for the extension of the Howard vein in Mary McKinney territory.

THE WEEK WITH THE CORPORATIONS

Following is a record of some of the transactions among Cripple Creek corporations of late:

Anaconda.

Mary McKinney comes to the rescue and Anaconda sells at 34 cents.

At least Anaconda sells at that price, and the reason given for it is that the Mary McKinney company will purchase of the Anaconda company three claims, the Grover Cleveland, Bustler and Anaconda, for the sum of $125,000. The information comes from reliable authority and the report has the hall mark of genuineness and the stamp of reason.

The Grover Cleveland, Bustler and Anaconda claims comprise about 20 acres, located together and adjoining the property of the Mary McKinney. [illegible] developments on the latter property are said to have made it desirable that these claims should be purchased, and that the plan was under consideration before the fatal circular was issued by the Anaconda directorate.

The issuance of the circular seems to have brought Anaconda affairs to a head. Not only will the Mary McKinney be securing territory which will be very valuable to itself, but it will be doing one of the most charitable acts which any one or any corporation could now render the mining world. Now the Mary McKinney people have every reason to put the deal through if it can be arranged.

There is one hitch. The articles of incorporation of the Anaconda company prohibit the sale of any part of the company's property. But these could be amended. A stockholders' meeting could be called and if the Denver stockholders interfered with such an amendment, then resistance would be as a [illegible] of glass in a hurricane. Anaconda stockholders have stood too [illegible]

The sum which the Mary McKinney company is credited with offering for the three claims would come within a few thousand dollars of paying the debt and the interest, as it is understood the two together would come to about $130,000. With the royalties which the company is getting from lessee the [illegible] could probably be paid.

That $125,000 should be offered for 20 acres of the Anaconda company's property [illegible] of the great value of the company's total acreage, which comprises over 100 acres, and the preposterous proposition that the mining world should stand aside and see it all sold for a paltry debt of $130,000.

The truth of the matter is that the mining world is not going to stand aside.

Mary McKinney is credited with the Joan [illegible] action of coming to the rescue.

But if by any chance Mary McKinney should not, there are others seeing visions about now.

The mining world is not a fool.

Gold King.

The great strength manifested by Gold King stock Monday gave rise once more to the ubiquitous rumors that the property is going to be sold, but it is impossible to round up the reports into any corral of reliability. On the morning call 500 shares changed hands at $1.20, and in the afternoon a similar lot went at $1.23, with that price bid at the close, and no offer made. Outside of the chance that negotiations may be pending for the sale of the property, the most reasonable explanation of the strength of the stock seems to be that the stockholders, hearing the rumors that a wealthy London corporation was after the mine, have come to the conclusion that they hold a desirable stock. While the management denies that a deal is on, and while it may be perfectly sure that the property is not going to be sold to the Venture corporation, the possibility that such a company might have made a good offer for the property would strengthen the stock, whether a sale were made or not; and it is not so unlikely that an offer has been made as that it has been declined.

The fact remains that the stock has advanced over 20 cents in a very short time. The last sale of any consequence was made at about a dollar, consequently the stock valuation of the company has advanced about $200,000 in the last few weeks.

Emma Aimee Annual.

The annual meeting of the Emma Aimee G. M. Co. was held at the office of the secretary, 6 Bank block, Friday evening. Over 571,000 shares were represented at the meeting in person and by proxy out of a total of 986,000 issued.

The report of the secretary showed [illegible] shares of stock and $[illegible] cash in the treasury [illegible] manager reported 832 feet of work done on the property, with a number of good-looking veins opened up.

The following officers and directors were elected for the ensuing year: Clay H. White, president; H. H. Dorsey, first vice president; E. W. Case, second vice president; G. B. Fish, treasurer; Will J. Mathews, secretary and treasurer.

Favorite Annual Meeting.

The annual stockholders' meeting of the Favorite Gold Mining company was held Friday afternoon in the offices of the company in the Bank block. There were represented at the meeting 738,790 shares of stock, either in person or by proxy, and the meeting resulted in the election of the following directors to serve for the ensuing year: H. K. Devereux, J. W. Miller, K. R. Babbitt, J. K. Miller, J. E. Hundley, [illegible]

Independence T. & M. Co. Dividend.

The Independence T. & M. company books closed on the 19th previous to the payment of the fourth monthly dividend of the company. It will be paid on the first of June. It will be at the usual rate of one cent a share on the total capitalization of 1,250,000 shares and amounts to $12,500, bringing the total amount distributed up to $50,000. The stock was very strong on 'change yesterday, advancing notwithstanding that the sales were all made ex-dividend.

Stratton's Independence.

The fourth quarterly dividend of the Stratton's Independence (Limited) was declared on the 14th instant, amounting in dollars to $188,000, and when this is paid on June 11, the company will have distributed among its stockholders $1,[illegible] 952,000, or nearly $2,000,000 a year. At the time the dividend was declared the following summary of the first year's working of the company was issued to the shareholders. The circular is printed entire:

3, Princes Street,
London, E. C., May 14, 1900.

To the Shareholders:

Gentlemen—At a meeting of the directors held today, it was decided to declare a fourth quarterly interim dividend of [illegible] less income tax, being at the rate of 40 per cent. per annum, payable on June 11 next, to all shareholders whose names appear on the register on June 6. The directors have further decided to have the accounts made up to June 30, and look forward to holding the general meeting about the end of August, when a report and balance sheet and profit and loss account will be presented, showing the result of the company's operations from May 1, 1899, to June 30, 1900. The first 12 months of the company's working of the mine having expired on April 30 last, the board considers it opportune to furnish the shareholders with some particulars of the results obtained during that period:

The actual output of the mine during the 12 months has amounted to 37,266 tons, valued at £563,400 sterling, or an average yield of over £15 per ton, while the proportion of profit on the output has considerably exceeded the consulting engineer's original estimate as given in the prospectus. The expectations as to dividends formed at the time of the acquisition of the mine by this company have been more than realized.

This highly satisfactory result of the first year's working has been achieved without depleting the mine of its rich ore. Mr. Rickard, in his original report, estimated the reserves of ore then existing in the mine at a total value of £1,386,776. Since that date the further developments of the mine have been so successful that he has been able to state that the tonnage blocked out by this company's explorations since his original report, has raised the total tonnage to three times what it was at the time of his first examination, and that the value of the ore reserves has been doubled.

The position of the company as regards the developments and the financial aspect is far better than it was when the property was taken over, even after allowing for the extraction of ore sufficient to provide for four quarterly dividends to the shareholders amounting to £400,000. The average yield of the ore sold—viz: about 3¾ ounces gold—is a proof that the mine has been very fairly worked, and the richer portions of the lodes have been only sparingly drawn upon. Had the stoping been confined to the core of the ore bodies, a much higher average yield would have been obtained, but your directors are of opinion that the shareholders will approve of their policy, which has been to ascertain the extent of the ore bodies rather than to bring out at the beginning the best points of the mine.

The shareholders will remember that only about one-quarter of the area owned by the company has been explored up to the present, and owing to the large increase of the ore exposed and made available for extraction during the last 12 months, the question of the development of the remaining portion of the property in the immediate future is not of pressing importance, but it is a question which will not be overlooked by your directors, and they believe that by judicious management in this direction the mine may be counted upon for results of a highly satisfactory character for many years to come. So far, no difficulty has been experienced in disposing of our product to the local smelters on fair terms as to cost of treatment, etc. A time may arrive when it may be found more economical to possess a reduction plant of our own, but this question is not yet ripe for decision.

The mine is in a high state of efficiency. In addition to the excellent equipment described in the prospectus, a new air compressor, with machine drills, has been installed during the past 12 months. New ore bins and house have also been erected to provide for an increased output. It will interest the shareholders to know that the control of the mine has now passed absolutely into the hands of the London Board, the whole remaining interest of Mr. W. S. Stratton, the original owner and vendor of the property, having been bought out, and there are now [illegible] shareholders on the register.

Two of your directors are now on their way to the mine, where they will spend some time in making themselves thoroughly familiar with the conditions of the property and in consulting with the local board. They will, however, return in time for the general meeting, when they will be able to give the shareholders the latest information with regard to the property.

By order of the Board,
[illegible] Richards, Secretary.

BOYS MAY BE ATHLETES

A Detailed System of Training Suggested.

(The following article is from the pen of Mr. [illegible] Philip M. [illegible] of New York. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible].)

If you are a boy between 12 and 19 years of age and are anxious to engage in outdoor sports of all sorts, I think I can give you some advice which may materially help you and possibly keep you from doing serious injury to yourself.

The first thing for a boy to do who is going in for such sports as basket ball, baseball, rowing, swimming and football is to build up his physique. To do this it is in no sense necessary to go in for a regular course in a gymnasium, though if one is within reach, of course, so much the better. Any boy who wishes to get into good condition for athletic exercise can do so at home with a little patience and courage.

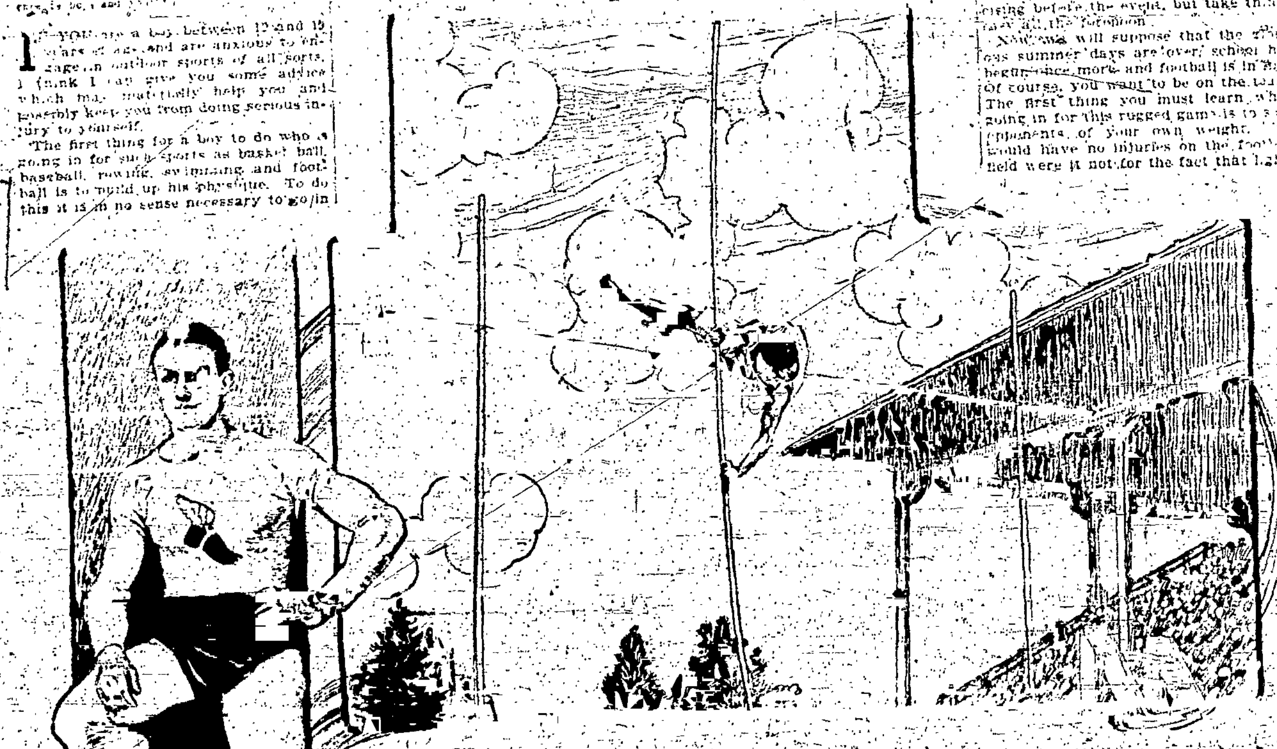
To begin with, go through the following exercises daily, always remembering [illegible] than too much, as the main thing to [illegible] beyond a muscular strain which may easily become very serious. I want to dwell very earnestly on this point, for I have known many boys to overdo matters in this way in the enthusiasm of starting in. A strain is very easily acquired. You may remember that Jeffries, the boxer, hurt his forearm so [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] with the [illegible] that it has troubled him ever since. Now, for the exercises:

[illegible] self several times on your toes.

2. Bend your knees several times to a squatting position.

3. Hold knees stiff forward and bend hands till they touch the toes.

4. Hold arms out full length, heels well together, chin in, shoulders thrown well back, causing sternum to project and giving what is termed "barrel chest." Inhale in this position until you feel a slight strain on lungs. At this point immediately change your position.



S. K. THOMAS, A MAGNIFICENT ALL AROUND ATHLETE.

bending arms to sides and taking same breathing exercise until you have same strained feeling.

5. Let hands remain at sides, double [illegible] turning thumbs out and [illegible] arms up almost to shoulders without bending elbows. Do this till the biceps are fatigued; then change position of elbows, raising them to rear, placing hands on hips, closing fists tight and throwing arms backward, with palms facing back.

[illegible] not time for regular gymnasium work use these exercises daily. They may be employed by boys from 10 to 20 with great benefit.

[illegible] baseball, swimming, rowing, etc. it is always well to begin by taking up such exercises as I have mentioned as a pre[illegible] baseball, begin to practice throwing daily during your intervals of leisure. If you can get to some open place where people are not around, practice throwing stones. You remember George Washington, who was the best athlete [illegible] thrower of his time, was the only [illegible] Potomac. He said he practiced daily pitching stones into the stream, until at last he could send them across to the opposite bank.

On your first day on the diamond do very little throwing, merely handling and tossing the ball underhand. Many boys who do not understand what "throwing the arm" means will on the first day's play try to put as much speed into the ball as if they had been in training for a month. The muscles [illegible] must not be stretched, but must be [illegible] so as to allow you to have control of the ball when you throw.

Gradual tossing of the sphere will stave off pain, and by the time July arrives that act of throwing with a "half arm swing" you will have the proper motion.

When you read in the paper's accounts of the mighty hits made by professional [illegible] you no doubt become envious and want to emulate their deeds. Now, that is all very well for grown men, but you must not try to hit the ball in that fashion. But employ what is known as the "hit and run" system. Hold the bat in position straight over your shoulders, hands about a foot apart, as the ball is pitched [illegible] with left foot planted well in front. Then bring your bat over the plate only. This is called "chop[illegible]." If you look up baseball records you will find that the [illegible] head the list of hitters. This chopping or [illegible] the ball half way is much better than striking wildly at it. Do not swing your bat, but meet the ball square, and you will find many fine drives result.

A boy who can make a single is the one who is depended on in an emergency rather than the fellow who occasionally makes a home run, but generally strikes out. Don't be afraid of the ball. Many batsmen [illegible] stepping back, thus losing the force of their shoulders and at the same time losing sight of the ball, which, even if hit, will generally go up for a pop fly or short infield hit. When you pull your left foot back, you lose all power to put speed in your stroke.

[illegible] playing baseball for a while and want to shine as a runner or jumper on the track or field. All you need, now is wind. For the first three weeks practice [illegible] their charge is that they make them do too much training. Do only half as much as is put down in the various [illegible] and you will about hit the mark.

Many [illegible] lose a great deal of valuable time from their studies pretending they are engaged in athletic work. This is not at all necessary. One half hour daily is all that is needed for one to be in a track suit [illegible] around the oval in their running [illegible] for nothing is so conducive to [illegible] and as a result they would have no ambition to study. Remember that you must be a student as well as an athlete.

[illegible] one of the hardest sports to train for is swimming. In this, as in every other athletic exercise, the most important consideration is to have your stomach in good condition. Be very careful as to the amount of pastry and fancy [illegible] you eat during hot weather. I believe in allowing my boys to eat heartily, but insist that everything they have shall be substantial food. At the [illegible] the boys may have everything [illegible] that is in season.

An all around athlete needs all around food. Sugar used to be considered bad for an athlete, but that is an exploded notion. It is good for him if taken in moderation and in the right forms. Trainers of race horses give it to their chargers when fitting them for the [illegible].

[illegible] same advice holds good as in regard to baseball. [illegible] to break a [illegible] the first weeks you are in the water. [illegible] [illegible] patience and your speed will increase each day, while at the same time you will perfect your stroke. Tell your companion who challenges you for a brush that you are in training, and if he has read this article he will know what you mean.

On the day of the race, which will probably take place in the afternoon, have a light lunch. Don't do any exercising before the event, but take things easy all the forenoon.

Now we will suppose that the glorious summer days are over, school has begun once more and football is in [illegible]. Of course, you want to be on the team. The first thing you must learn when going in for this rugged game is to seek opponents of your own weight. We would have no injuries on the football field were it not for the fact that light weights are put on the teams when opposed to very heavy [illegible] [illegible] an expert on a light team and able to go through the season [illegible] star player on a big varsity team and at the end of the year find myself maimed for life or at any rate badly injured.

Boys should remember that to play football they must develop their muscles, without which one cannot get into [illegible] and scrimmages without injury. If padding is needed, take my advice and wear [illegible] any battering you may receive began [illegible] you wear a more [illegible] shoulder [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] the men who have made a long study of the game have invented these pads and guards, and they are mighty useful. But endeavor also to have all the vital parts of your body well guarded and supported, or you are liable to do yourself serious hurt.

Don't be a one sided athlete. Don't be a baseball crank and at the same time [illegible] that football or fear that fencing will cost you an eye, or that rowing will pull an arm out of you, or that swimming will drown you. Strive to be an all around good man. But don't necessarily try to be a record breaker.

All exercises taken judiciously will develop you into a real American athlete—the kind that can beat the world.

[illegible] man in New York whom I would like you to imitate in this respect [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] never broken a record and doesn't want to, for he goes in for sports for the love of exercise. I refer to S. K. Thomas, a Wall street broker. He is the champion gymnast of the famous Seventh regiment of New York, an organization which contains many fine athletes. Last year he won the A. A. U. tumbling championship. He is the champion all around athlete of the New York Athletic [illegible] [illegible] ball players of the Crescent Athletic club of New York, is a fine player at lacrosse, hockey and basketball—in fact, he can play all our games well. [illegible] 5 feet 6 inches in height. Besides taking part in sports, he manages to get through a great amount of business.

HIGH AND LOW GEARS.

It is predicted that riders will soon realize that the use of a coaster brake will result in lower gears being used.
